A Religion of Social Justice

A Creed For the Jew of Today

By RABBI FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

WITHOUT social justice there can be no Judaism of the future. Without social justice our temples and synagogues become Towers of Babel which confuse the minds of men and mock at God. Without social justice most of our prayers are but rhetorical froth and our ideals so many soap bubbles. Without social justice our congregations become spiritual clubs where anemic theological exercises are carried on and archaic symbols perpetuated. Without social justice Judaism becomes a feeble shadow with little meaning for society.

Eliminate from Judaism the passion for social justice and you eliminate from it is distinctiveness and its importance in the history of mankind. The discovery of the belief in one God was important because it flowed from the corollary of one humanity. If there is a brotherhood of man, then social justice must prevail. No other people, no other religion has produced such a series of men coming in rapid succession and pleading for the exploited, the under-privileged, the orphan, the widow, as did the Jews when the prophets of Israel appeared upon the scene. The modern reformer must go to the spiritual arsenal of Israel. Need I remind you of an Elijah appealing for the rights of Naboth against despotism, of an Amos attacking the idle selfish rich who are at ease in Zion, and demanding that justice flow like water and righteousness like a mighty stream? Of a Hosea who sees in his harlot wife not a hopeless derelict but a soul that can be redeemed? Of an Isaiah who excoriates those greedy exploiters who join house to house and field to field? Of a Jeremiah who denounces even the luxury-loving king with the immortal words: "Woe unto him who buildeth his house by unrighteousness, and his chambers by injustice, that useth his neighbor's service without wages and giveth him not his hire." Need I call again to your attention that among the Ten Commandments there are three which are theological, pertaining to the relationship between man and God, and seven which are sociological, referring to the relationship between man and his fellowmen? Need I remind you that the commandment to observe the Sabbath was the great Magna Charta of democracy, for on the Sabbath day master and slave were to be equal and to rest in the leisure created by God? Nor is this spirit of social justice limited to prophet and biblical writer. The Talmud contained six hundred and thirteen commandments. One rabbi said that these six hundred and thirteen can be reduced to ten. Another rabbi said they might be reduced to three: "Do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with God." Still another rabbi said that the six hundred and thirteen commandments can be reduced to one: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." According to this rabbi social justice and Judaism were synonymous.

Not all faiths and cults share this attitude. In modern times we have seen the rise of cults popular among certain types of neurotics who have refused to face the realities of life and have taken refuge in a world of illusion, saying: "There is no evil; there is no suffering; there is no pain." In that fool's paradise they have lived, but invariably they have been people in comfortable material circumstances. Those mothers whose children become daily more anemic because of undernourishment, whose husbands walk about idly because employment is not available, who see no relief from the drudgery of household tasks and have neither the leisure nor the opportunity for sunlight —these are not the ones who will say that there is no suffering and no disease and no pain in this world.

There are religions that have not sought to deny the misery and the unhappiness which exist. They have called this world a vale of tears, they have held that suffering, though bad for the bodies of men, is yet good for their souls. They have riveted the attention of their votaries on a future life. They have promised that those who suffer here will be rewarded elsewhere. They have dulled men's passion for social justice. Wherever that philosophy has held sway progress has been retarded, the economic conditions of the poor have been most deplorable.

Against both these philosophies of escape from suffering Judaism has protested. The dominant conception of immortality in Jewish thought has been the conception of a physical resurrection which meant that men would live again in the future not in the other world but in this world, when the just social order to which they have contributed will be ushered in. The prophets of Israel refused to speculate on the hereafter and to dissipate their energies in discussions about the unsolvable mystery of death. They spoke of this world. They saw that much of the suffering of man was man-made and could be corrected. And thus it is that the notion of a just social order, a kingdom of God in this world, became dominant in Jewish thinking. It found expression in the prayer book, in the Sh'ma Yisroel, which was recited thrice daily by the Jew of old. The rabbies called that prayer the yoke of the Kingdom of Heaven. Whoever affirms the unity of God enlists himself in the army of man to battle for the triumph of the ideals of social justice. And because our rabbies knew human nature well they endeavored thrice daily to remind man of his supreme duty. That same longing for the Kingdom of God finds expression in the Kaddish prayer, the prayer for the dead which is primarily a prayer for the living. The traditional Kaddish contained no reference to the dead or to the hereafter. The traditional Kaddish was a doxology and contained a prayer for the establishment of the Kingdom of God.

But enough of the past. What of the present? If this conception is correct, then a Jewish congregation is "a group of men and women banded together under the inspiration of religion to champion personal and social righteousness." Can this be said of most of our congregations? Do they not seem to be banded together for almost everything but that? Are not congregations too frequently concerned with buildings, with members, with budgets, with resignations? Does not the major business of our temples appear to be almost exclusively like the business of the market place? Do we not weigh and judge them in terms of numbers?

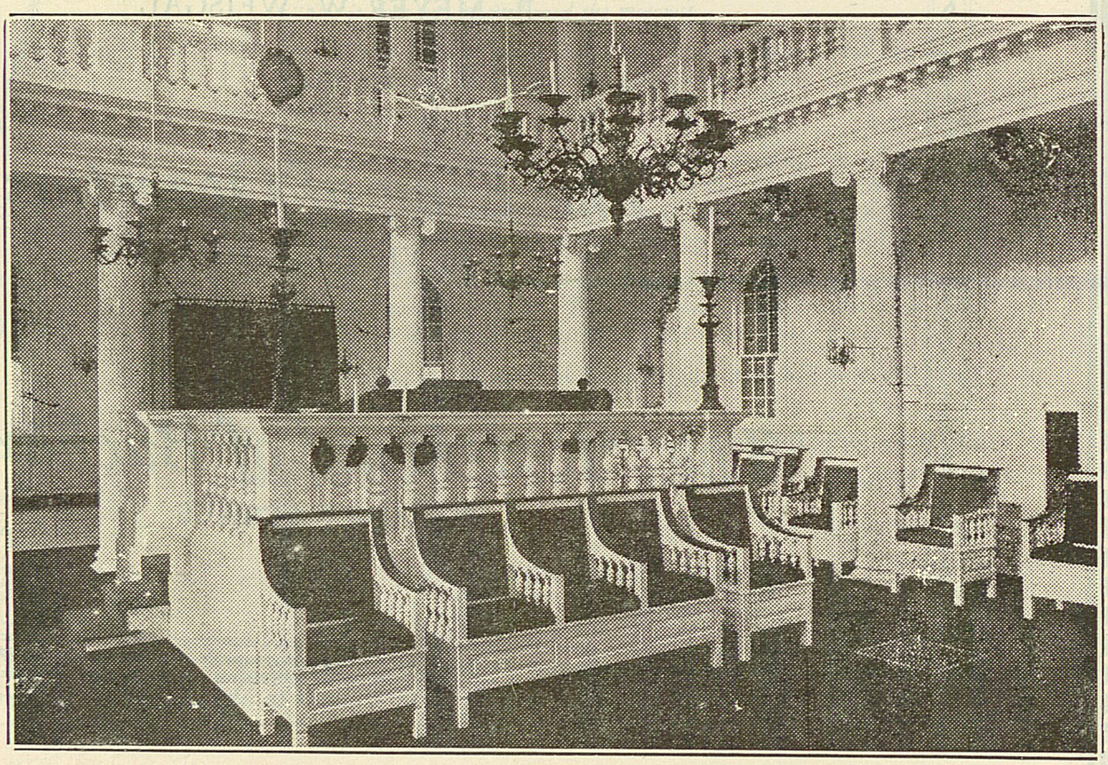

Unless in the future these problems of social justice become of vital concern to temple members Judaism will lose its vitality and its power. Unless our presidents and our boards of directors stand in the community not merely as men successful in the market place but also as men devoted to the social and ethical implications of Judaism, unless our rabbis become voices and not echoes, voices for the underprivileged and dispossessed, there is little hope for a noble survival of Ju-

Although he is one of the younger men in the American pulpit, Rabbi Isserman of St. Louis has won nation-wide attention for his advocacy of progressive measures within the rabbinate. He conceived and organized the recent "religious disarmament conference" held at St. Louis, whose sessions, participated in by Catholics, Protestants and Jews of national reputation, attracted the attention of all people interested in the advancement of co-operation between the religions. In this article, written especially for the Seven Arts Feature Syndicate, Rabbi Isserman discusses the place of social justice in the religious values of modern Judaism. This subject formed the basis of his illuminating address at the St. Louis conference.

American Rabbis to Make Pilgrimage to Oldest Hebrew House of Worship in the United States

During the Forty-first Annual Convention of Central Conference of American Rabbis, at Providence, R. I., June 25-30, the gathering will visit Touro Synagogue, Newport, dedicated December 2, 1762. Picture shows Colonial interior of historic edifice built by Peter Harrison, famous architect of structures in Boston, Cambridge and Newport. Enclosure at right is where George Washington sat when addressed by Moses Seixas, in August, 1790, and from which the first President made his reply: "It is now no more that toleration is spoken of as if it were the indulgence of one class of people that another enjoyed the exercise of their inherent natural rights, for happily the Government of the United States, which gives to bigotry no sanction, to persecution no assistance, requires only that they who live under its protection should demean themselves as good citizens in giving it on all occasions their effectual support."

Louis Bamberger and His Five Million Dollar Endowment

By MEYER W. WEISGAL

IN RUMANIA, Hungary and Austria there is a numerus clausus which restricts the entrance of Jews into universities to a small percentage of the total production. Even in the United States a number of schools in the East have established a quota system, which is enforced with particular rigor in the professional schools. But when Louis Bamberger announced a gift of $5,000,000 for the establishment of a foundation to aid advanced learning he made it a specific condition of his gift that pupils be admitted and faculty be selected on a strictly non-sectarian basis. It was the grand gesture which American Jews have so often made in past years, but which seems to be ignored by other philanthropists and the general public.

For a number of years Jewish philanthropists have been assailed by their own people for making large gifts to non-Jewish causes without adequately providing for the movements sponsored by Jews. But to date the Jews are the only group in the United States who insist on making non-sectarian gifts but who do not, in turn, benefit from this generous attitude. Of Louis Bamberger it can be said, however, that he has adequately appreciated the good causes of his own people as well as those in which the public at large is interested.

His latest gift is inspired by a totally original idea for which Mr. Bamberger deserves as much commendation as for the contribution of $5,000,000 provided by his sister and himself. The Institute of Advanced Learning, as it is tentatively known, which will be located on the four hundred acre estate of Mr. Bamberger in East Orange, N. J., marks an innovation in the world of scholarship.

There will be no Freshman caps worn in its halls. There will be no Sophomore rush on its campus. There will be no Junior prom or Senior hop. There will be no weekly convocations at which lusty throats will shout: "Hail, Alma Mater!" And yet it will be a real university in the academic sense.

The Institute is to be devoted only to research and to advanced learning. It is to be co-educational and open to earnest students of all races and creeds. The only factor determining a student's right of entry will be his native ability and his general scholastic attainments. The faculty also will be chosen only with regardness to the eminence and fitness of its members, be they black, white or yellow, be they adherents of any religion whatsoever or of none at all.

Mr. Bamberger had a very definite reason for endowing the Foundation. There are many capable men and women who could do the world and themselves an incalculable amount of good if they were able to continue research work in their favorite fields after graduation. But often lack of adequate finances makes such congenial work an unrealizable dream. The endowment is intended to provide ample opportunity for all such students. Here at the Foundation they will be able to devote themselves whole-heartedly to their work without intruding thought of financial insecurity. This endowment, Mr. Bamberger was careful to emphasize, is only an initial endowment. More money will be necessary—and provided—later to carry on the work.

As yet there is no medical department, but it is expected that there will be one later. Of that one may feel assured, for Dr. Abraham Flexner, who has been appointed the first director of the Foundation, is the former Director of the Division of Medical Education of the Rockefeller Foundation. Dr. Flexner is in Europe at the moment, but when he returns he will set about procuring outstanding teachers in their respective fields as members of the faculty.

The scholarly world of America was thrilled last week when Louis Bamberger, Jewish philanthropist of Newark, N. J., announced a gift of five million dollars for the establishment of an Institute of Advanced Learning. This sketch explains the purpose of his endowment and characterizes his personality.

—THE EDITOR.

When the work of the staff and the students actually gets under way America will witness an experiment unique on these shores. True, we do have medical foundations in which only graduate students are to be found. But these are too specialized ever to be spoken of as universities. In Europe the idea of the graduate university is not altogether uncommon. Yet even there the line has not been drawn so strictly or so successfully between the graduate and undergraduate bodies. The experiment has been urged for the Hebrew University on Mount Scopus in Jerusalem. But it remained for Mr. Louis Bamberger to put it into execution in his foundation.

It is a far cry from the lad whose first job was one of sweeping and runnings errands in a Baltimore store for four dollars per week to the seventy-five-year-old man who has become famous in the last few years for his spectacular money gifts. Last year, when Mr. Bamberger retired from the active leadership of his tremendous mercantile establishment in Newark, he gained wide notice by distributing, as personal free-will gifts, one million dollars among two hundred and twenty-five employes who had been with him for fifteen years or more. The employes were given their choice of cash or annuities—and reports have it, naturally enough, that the majority chose cash.

Mr. Bamberger can well appropriate from personal experience the help a little cash at the right moment can be to a struggling worker. As a boy working for a mere pittance in his native Baltimore he somehow managed to save regularly and thus to develop the habit of thrift. He was still very young when he came to New York, desiring nothing so much as to find a suitable place to open a store.

But the quest was wearying and vain. Two years he trudged from place to place, doing odd jobs the while—and the total result was a decision to try Newark. In Newark he again walked the streets, keeping a sharp eye open for suitable locations, making mental calculations of the crowds that passed each spot. He had already figured out for himself one of the first fundamentals of a successful mercantile establishment: location at a spot which attracts crowds. At last he found the spot that appealed to him.

And then he discovered that he did not have enough money with which to open negotiations. So it happened that two other men got in ahead of him and acquired the site. Four months after they went into bankruptcy, and young Bamberger, who in the meantime had made certain financial connections, bought the bankrupt store. The co-founders with him of L. Bamberger and Company were Louis M. Frank, who died in 1910, and Felix Ful, who died recently.

Through the years, as his business developed and fought its way to astonishing success, Mr. Bamberger gradually widened his horizon and attained a genuine interest in the higher arts. His appreciation of music manifested itself in a series of musical scholarships for the children of New Jersey for training at the Institute of Musical Art. He established scholarships at the Newark College of Engineering in the memory of Felix Fuld. The diverse ramifications of his interests caused him to prepare an exposition of the history of rug manufacture. He also contributed $650,000 to the Newark Museum. In memory of the struggles of his own boyhood, and in a genuine desire to make life easier for other youngsters, he has given large sums toward a camp for Essex County Boy Scouts. Nor has he been less generous to Jewish causes. The Beth Israel Hospital of Newark and the Jewish Joint Agricultural Corporation can both amply testify to that.

Mr. Bamberger, who is unmarried, lives with his sister, Mrs. Felix Fuld, Mrs. Fuld's first husband was Louis M. Frank, one of the three original partners in the Bamberger store. The interests of the store have thus always been also the interests of the home—a circumstance which may be a factor in its phenomenal success.

When Mr. Bamberger retired last year and handed the active management of his store over to R. H. Macy and Company he announced that he wished to devote more time to his personal interests and to philanthropic work. "I am getting old,' he said, "and I want to be relieved of the active management and responsibility of the business which I founded. It is a big business." And this decision, by giving him the leisure to realize his dream of a graduate university, has benefited not only him but that considerable group of students who needed just such an endowment.

Although the "super-university" is the personal creation of Mr. Bamberger it has been placed in the hands of a Board of Trustees whose standing in public affairs ensures the administration of the Institute along the most progressive lines. One wonders, however, whether, as this non-sectarian institution develops, the tendency to restrict Jewish attendance at American universities will increase.

The King of Operettas

A True Story in Four Scenes

By VICTOR LEON

TWENTY-SEVEN years have passed since Ferenc Lehar gave me his first photo. It still hangs over my desk. A rather serious-minded youth, three-eighths artist, five-eighths good, solid bourgeois, stands out on the glazed paper. He is well and even fashionably dressed; his suit bespeaks a skilful tailor, his collar and tie afford little grounds for criticism. His thick hair, however, has hardly been combed. A temperamental lock falls over the high forehead behind which flutter so many unborn notes, impatiently awaiting arrangement into beautiful melodies. His amazing and impudent mustache has a mock-heroic air of success. Moreover, that picture—and in this lies its uniqueness—is the first civilian portrait of the erstwhile miltiary band conductor.

Thus this product of the photographer's art has a historical value. The more so since it is the first picture of him after his very first great stage success, which is not out-of-date even today—our "Rastelbinder." And it is even more valuable because of the inscription, which to me makes it of inestimable worth; for in charmingly affectionate exaggeration he wrote on it: "To my discoverer."

As it happens, however, it was not I who played Columbus to Ferenc. It was another, one whose part in his discovery he did not know until much later, to whom he owed his entry into the phalanx of breath-takingly successful operetta composers. It was my daughter Felicitas who discovered him, almost three decades ago.

"Why are you so late again, Lici? Can't you tear yourself away from the skating rink?" It was her pedagogical Mama who spoke. But her Papa, who was not so pedagogically inclined, said to the twelve-year-old young lady: "I guess it really doesn't matter whether you come home a half-hour sooner or later, as long as you've been having a good time."

"A wonderful time, Papa! It was divine! I can't ever make up my mind to take off my skates when that marvelous conductor is leading the military band!"

"What in the world? What marvelous conductor? Who might he be?"

"I've no idea. But he plays a perfectly thrilling march—somebody told me he wrote it himself. I tell you, Papa, that march—it's simply heavenly, divine. Everybody's crazy about him—people can't stop applauding him. I can't either. And he has to play that march over and over again. You have not got a march like that in any of your operettas—not one that is so—so—I don't know just what—so perfect! Come down to the skating rink some time and listen to it. Its name is 'Jetzt geht's los!' And Papa, you should see him conduct—with such spirit and dash and fire and verve—"

"No, not really!"

"He's wonderful! Perfectly thrilling!"

A few days later:

"Do you want to know that wonderful band conductor's name, Papa? His name's Lehar."

"Lehar? All right. It's as good a name as any other."

II

In the summer of that year, 1901, we went for our usual vacation at Unterach. Shortly before we left Vienna the mailman brought a package. In it was a pianoforte arrangement of "Kukuska," a lyrical drama in three acts by Felix Falzari, with music by Ferenc Lehar. On the title page stood an urbane dedication. In addition, there was a letter in which this Ferenc Lehar begged my pardon for sending me his opera although we were personally acquainted. He would be happy, he contined, if I would entrust him with a libretto, for which he would then compose the music. Packages and letters of that sort, are rather commonplace occurrences in my life. Very impolitely, and because I was horribly lazy, I promptly forgot both letter and package.

Weeks passed. We were at Unterach. It was raining. It always does, there. Impossible to go out There I was, a prisoner in the house.

I heard the piano. Lici. What in the world was she playing? Smetana? Dvorak? Tschaikowski? Something Slavic, at any rate. Genuinely Slavic. Beautifully unique and uniquely beautiful. What might it be? I went into the music room and listened. When Lici stopped for a moment I asked her: "Who wrote it? Where did you get it?"

"It's from Lehar's 'Kukuska'."

"What is 'Kukuska?' Who is Lehar?"

"Why, Papa, that's the wonderful conductor of the military band we had at the skating rink! Don't you remember?"

I was very much at sea. But Lici enlightened me. She had taken along the piano arrangement of "Kukuska" simply because Ferenc Lehar's name was on it. And she had fallen in love with the music—it was so different! Especially those marvelous Russian songs, which sounded as if they were Victor Leon is the nom de plume under which Victor Hirschfeld, Austrian Jewish writer, has won world renown as a librettist. His successes include such widely known operettas as "The Merry Widow," "Viennese Blood," "The Polish Jew," etc. In this charmingly written feuilleton Victor Leon recounts how his daughter, Lici, discovered Ferenc Lehar, composer of "The Merry Widow," and numerous other internationally famous operetta successes, and generally acknowledged to be the king of operetta composers.

New York, N. DENY SMUTS EVER GOT PALESTINE ORDER

New York, N. Y.—The report spread by the British Colonial Office that an offer had been extended to General Jan Smuts to go to Palestine as special investigator but that Smuts had refused it is called a falsehood by the London correspondent of the Jewish Morning Journal. In a special dispatch the correspondent states that although the Colonial Office promised Dr. Weizmann that such an offer would be made to General Smuts and even though a report to this effect was circulated, it is now learned that nothing was ever done about it. It is hinted that this is another evidence of Colonial Office duplicity to the Jews.

KAUFMAN NOMINATION TO SENATE CONFIRMED

Washington, D. C.—The Senate has confirmed the nomination by President Hoover of David E. Kaufman as Minister to Siam.

Central Conference of American Rabbis 41st Annual Convention, Providence, R. I., June 25-30

Providence, R. I., June 20.—Revision of the Union Prayer Book is expected to be the foremost question at the Central Conference of American Rabbis, when it holds its Forty-first Annual Convention in this city, June 25 to 30.

The body of the convention will undoubtedly favor, as it did at Detroit last year, "a thoroughgoing revision" so that the new Prayer Book will shed lustre on Reform Judaism in America and will square with liberal religious concepts.

Proponents of revision claim that the Prayer Book put out ten years ago was in no sense a revision, but purely an oral or literary revamping, while the present movement will result in the first real revision that has taken place since the Prayer Book was written.

A vigorous minority opposed to the revision claim that the new book will suit neither the rabbis nor the congregations and that the real difficulty is that the present Prayer Book is not properly read.

At the Detroit convention the Liturgical committee was instructed to make a survey of the kind of revision desired by the conference and to confer with a similar committee working for revision, which was appointed by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, and to report back at Providence the result of their study and conference.

It is generally admitted that the revision will not take place in a year, but the body of the conference believe that although the present Prayer Book has a great Jewish background and contains beautiful Pre-Kaddish prayers and meditations, yet as a theological presentation of the spirit of Reform Judaism it is unsatisfactory to the rabbinate and laity. It has been pointed out that "Thy People Israel" are not the only ones that have enjoyed redemption as the Prayer Book implies, that the psalms used for responsive reading show confusion between the idea of "antique" and "antiquated."

Those opposed to the revision state that a new Prayer Book would be no guarantee of the return of a prayerful spirit to the people.

Undoubtedly the policy of revision will be settled at the convention here: Whether the new book will contain more traditional and less material or vice versa.

Four speakers, representing the different schools of thought, will present studies on the course that revision should take: Rabbi Sol B. Freehof of Chicago will speak on "The Union Prayerbook in the Evolution of the Liturgy"; Rabbi Israel Bettan and Rabbi Samuel S. Cohon, both of Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, will present the function and the religious ideas of the Prayer Book, respectively, and Rabbi Jonah B. Wise of New York City will discuss "The Devotional Value of the Union Prayer Book."

The present book has been attacked on the grounds that it ought to be brought into conformity with the intellectual and scientific outlook of the times. There is a disposition to go about the revision in a deliberate, dignified and thoughtful manner so that the new work will suffice for many years to come.

The visit of Dr. Isaiah Raffalovich of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, is anxiously awaited, as this immigration expert, under the Jewish Colonization Association, will be able to tell of the possibilities of South America as a future Jewish stronghold.

It is admitted that a remarkable work has been accomplished under Dr. Raffalovich in the steady accretions of Jewish immigrants to Brazil and the "leading out of the wilderness" of scattered groups into well-organized communities.

"Are the Jewish elements destined to repeat in South America what has happened on this Continent, as their numbers, wealth and influence increase? Is there a possibility of South America becoming the new focus of Jewish influence in the world, as America is today?" These are questions that the address of the distinguished visitor on "The Condition of Jewry and Judaism in South America" is hoped to throw light upon.

The final draft of the new hymnal will be presented by Rabbi Louis Wolsey of Philadelphia for minor changes before being ordered printed. This work has been carefully and painstakingly carried out, new hymns have been composed by leading organists throughout the country and set to the old words, and in many instances both words and music are new. The new Hymnal will be under discussion at the Community House, Newport, on the morning that the rabbis and their families make the pilgrimage to the Touro Synagogue, in that city, "the oldest Hebrew House of Worship in the United States."

The new hymnal will restore to the Temple, it is believed, some of its ancient glory in song and instrument that prevailed during Biblical days.

PROMISES SIMPSON REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER

Geneva.—In reply to an inquiry by the Mandates Commission of the League as to when the British Government would be ready with its report on the immigration and land problems in Palestine. Dr. Drummond Shiels, British representative, declared that Sir John Simpson's report ought to be completed by the early part of September.

FOUR DRAW UP REPORT OF MANDATES COMMISSION

Geneva.—The work of drawing up the report of the Permanent Mandates Commission on the testimony that has been offered before it with regard to Palestine has been assigned to a sub-committee of four, consisting of Dr. William Rappard of Switzerland, Dr. M. Van Rees of Holland, H. Arts of Belgium and R. Marlin of France.

PRAISES EFFICIENCY OF JEWISH CHARITIES

Boston, Mass.—That Jewish charity organizations throughout the country have a record of greater efficiency than any other charity groups was the statement made by Ralph G. Hurlin, director of statistics of Russel Sage Foundation of New York, at the National Conference of Jewish Social Service. He praised the Jewish welfare agencies because they kept their cases under care for a longer period, had larger staffs, and were more generous with financial relief. Statistics to the same effect were presented by A. W. McMillen, director of registration of social statistics of the University of Chicago, who stated that the average expenditure for family relief among Jewish agencies was 72 per cent higher than among non-Jewish groups.

The conference closed with the election of Philip L. Seman, director of the Jewish People's Institute of Chicago, as President. Ferdinand S. Bach of St. Louis was re-elected as treasurer and George W. Rabinoff, secretary. Dudley Sicher and Mary E. Boretz of New York, and Hyman Kaplan of San Francisco were elected vice presidents.

London.—The statement made by Dr. Drummond Shiels, Undersecretary of State for the Colonies, before the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League of Nations, in which he declared that England's duty was to establish a home for Jews and not a Jewish State in Palestine has won the approval of the majority of the English papers. Among these are the Post, Express and Mail.

ISAACS APPOINTMENT POSTPONED FOR DOMINION CONFERENCE

He was formerly Vice Commissar of Industry. This makes the second important Jewish appointment in two weeks, as Jan Gomarnik was named chief of the Soviet Military Council.

PALESTINE MANDATE— SOCIETY SCORES SHIELS

London.—Dr. Drummond Shiels, Undersecretary of State for the Colonies, is severely rebuked for his testimony before the Mandates Commission at Geneva in a statement issued by the Palestine Mandate Society, headed by Herbert Sidebotham, noted Liberal journalist and pro-Zionist. Pointing out that Jewish public opinion throughout the world has been aroused against England, the statement deplores the remarks made by Shiels in regard to British duties in Palestine, which he defined as aiding the Jews to find a home. The Society emphasized the strategic importance of Palestine for the preservation of the Empire, and calls upon the Government to administer the Mandate in such fashion as to carry out the Jewish National Home policy.

DECLARES SIMPSON APPROVES IMMIGRATION BAN REVOCATION

London.—At an executive meeting of the British section of the Jewish Agency it was authoritatively stated that Sir John Simpson has cabled to the Colonial Office from Jerusalem that he thinks revocation of the immigration stoppage measure justified. The Colonial Office, however, has thus far refused to act on this reported statement by its head.

PASSFIELD REFUSES AUDIENCE TO BRITISH JEWS

London.—Lord Passfield, Secretary of State for the Colonies, has excused himself from receiving a delegation of the Jewish Board of Deputies, which intended to see him in connection with the stoppage of Jewish immigration into Palestine. The Board, which is the representative body of British Jews, adopted a resolution protesting against the immigration ban and at the same time drew up a memorandum describing wherein Great Britain had failed in its fulfilment of the Mandate.

SOLOMON, NOTED JURIST, DIES

London—Sir William Solomon, former Chief Justice of South Africa, died here at the age of 77. He was born in Capetown and received his education in England. Upon returning to South America he began a career in which he distinguished himself as a lawyer. In 1910 he received his first judicial appointment.

ARABS THREATEN ANOTHER RIOT IF EXECUTIONS OCCUR

Jerusalem. — Three Arab journals have published editorials declaring that if the three Arabs condemned to death are hanged as per schedule there will be another uprising of the population similar to that which occurred last August. In the meantime the police have taken every precaution to prevent disturbances during or after the execution of sentence against those who were not included in the recent commutation of sentence by the High Commissioner.

Of this amount $32,500 is to go to charity. A sum of $25,000 is to be distributed by her three daughters from time to time as they see fit.

HADASSAH ADOPTS MEMORANDUM

New York, N. Y.—The National Board of Hadassah has gone on record as favoring the adoption of the proposal submitted by Supreme Courst Justice L. D. Brandeis for the administration of American Zionist affairs, and has written accordingly to its chapters throughout the country, urging them to send delegates to the Cleveland convention of the Zionists on June 29th. Mrs. Robert Szold, President of Hadassah, is the wife of one of the four signers of the Brandeis memorandum.

WARBURG SAYS JEW TOO HYSTERICAL

New York, N. Y.—That Jews have been too hysterical in their attitude to the situation in Palestine was the statement made by Felix M. Warburg, Chairman of the Administrative Committee of the Jewish Agency, at a banquet launching the Allied Jewish Campaign in the Brownsville section of the city. Referring to a conversation he had with Ramsay MacDonald when he was last in London, Mr. Warburg said that MacDonald has assured him that the Shaw Report was more offensive to him than to the Jews. Mr. Warburg said that England was not unfriendly to the Jews, but that the situation in Palestine was complicated by many other issues and that Jews should have patience instead of yielding to hysteria when some newspaper, anxious for a sensation, makes big headlines out of a Palestine issue.

OPPOSE TEACHING RELIGION ON SCHOOL TIME

New York, N. Y.—The New York branch of the United Synagogue of America has come out against the program of the Interfaith Conference, representing the three religions, to secure permission from the New York Board of Education to dismiss children from school an hour earlier so that they may secure religious instruction. A resolution adopted by the United Synagogue points to the principle of the separation of Church and State and declares that religious school attendance "during the time set for school attendance will tend toward the integration of the school system with religious activities."

SELIGSON AND MRS. HIRSCH WIN NEW YORK TENNIS TITLES

New York, N. Y.—Two Jews have won the men's and women's metropolitan clay court singles championships of the city. Julius Seligson, Lehigh University senior, emerged triumphant over some of the greatest players in the country in the men's round. Mrs. Caroline Swartz Hirsch of San Francisco, defeated Mrs. Scherber of England, thus winning the women's championship.

RABBI DENIES THAT RUMANIA IS A PHILO-SEMITIC NATION

New York, N. Y.—A dispatch to the New York Times covering a tour which its Rumanian correspondent, G. E. R. Gedye, made through Rumania in order to ascertain the extent of anti-Semitism there reports a conversation with the rabbi of Roman, the town from which Prof. Alexander Cuza was elected to Parliament. The rabbi declares: "That the present government is philo-Semitic is untrue. In Rumania a philo-Semitic government is, unfortunately, inconceivable, but this one at least is no worse than its predecessors and does not encourage anti-Semitism."

JEWISH STATESMAN DIES

Paris—Louis Lucien Klotz, one of the stormiest figures in French politics and Minister of Finance under the late Clemenceau, died here at the age of 62. Accused of various crimes, he was lodged in prison, but was released through the intervention of his friends. His decline in political life occurred simultaneously with his tremendous losses in the stock market. He was one of the signers of the Treaty of Versailles.

COURTS LIFT INJUNCTION ON DREYFUS PLAY

Paris—As a result of the lifting of the injunction secured by Capt. Alfred Dreyfus, Henri Torres, attorney who defended Sholom Schwartzbard, assassin of General Petlura, will present the play based on the life of Dreyfus, which has been creating a furore in Berlin. Royalist circles in France had strenuously objected to the play, as had Capt. Dreyfus himself.

YOUNG ISRAEL URGES GREATER INTEREST IN YIDDISH

Long Branch, N. J.—The annual conference of Young Israel, Jewish youth organization, closed with the election of Edward Silver as President. It was announced at the convention that the Lubawetscher Rabbi, Schneuerson, had declared himself interested in the work of Young Israel and had stated that it was the only Jewish youth organization in America which offers hope for the future of Judaism in America. Young Israel, an Orthodox group, adopted resolutions protesting against calendar reform, urging greater interest in kashruth and in the observance of the Sabbath and all dietary laws. Another resolution adopted called upon the members of Young Israel to support the Yiddish language, because it is the link between the old and the new generation. Every member was urged to learn Yiddish and to aid every Yiddish cultural effort.

Montefiore Hospital

IT IS JUST about a year ago since the new Montefiore Hospital was opened to the public, so it may be of interest to consider that institution in its broader aspect at this time. One is convinced that in view of the brief span of its existence that it has achieved an enviable record. To open a hospital of that size, to organize each department, to create a staff, to work out a thousand and one other problems that are inevitably bound up with a large hospital as successfully as has been done at the Montefiore speak volumes for the thought, the energy and the initiative that have been invested in it. Paramount to all other obligations is the extraordinary amount of free service the hospital has extended to patients. We are advised that over half of the patients during the past year have been given free treatment, which indicates the sense of public obligation that rests on those directing the institution. It would be a miracle if the Montefiore Hospital after eleven months of life would have reached the same degree of perfection as other hospitals that have been in existence for a great many years. But great credit is due those men and women who so quickly organized the various departments and who have so administered their duties as to have established such wonderful record of efficiency in so short a time.

One of the reasons advanced for the erection of the new Montefiore Hospital was to give the Jewish doctors an opportunity to have hospital experience under proper conditions and with all the equipment that advanced medical science calls for. We believe that this purpose has been achieved. And it becomes increasingly apparent even to those who perhaps were rather indifferent to this phase of the situation that it has proved a valuable aid to our doctors whose hospital experience was under most inadequate conditions, until the new building was erected.

The fact of the need for this new hospital is indicated by the number of patients who have sought medical aid there. The wards and almost all the rooms have been filled during the past six months. The Kosher section has been in demand at all times; occasionally it has been impossible to accommodate those who insist on a Kosher kitchen, which indicates that there is a real need for this division of hospitalization.

We feel that the Jewish community has every reason to be completely satisfied with the sacrifices it brought in order to give to Pittsburgh another great medical unit. Leaving aside those who use private rooms and are able to obtain treatment in any hospital, there are thousands of poor people who have had reason to thank God for the Montefiore Hospital and to bless those who are responsible for it. It is a matter for congratulation that the Hospital was able to obtain the services of Mr. Abraham Oseroff as its Director. We know of no one in this community who through experience with every character of public service of a welfare nature is better equipped for such an exacting position. And although Mr. Oseroff has been in charge only a few months one can already see the results of an intelligent understanding and sympathetic approach to the many problems which arise in connection with the administraation of such an institution.

Miriam Schoenfeld Day

MOST of us who are engaged in public service go through life without much appreciation. If any it is rather of a perfunctory nature. So it is rather unique to record the tribute about to be paid to Miss Miriam Schoenfeld who for a great many years has been the Field Secretary and Organizer of the Jewish Religious Schools of Southwestern Pennsylvania under the direction of the Council of Jewish Women and the Rodef Shalom Sisterhood. The supervisors and the teachers of the Religious schools in this district at the final meeting of the school year decided to show their appreciation of the splendid work done by Miss Schoenfeld by setting aside next Sunday, June 22nd, as Miriam Schoenfeld Day and holding a reception in her honor at the Hotel Schenley, to which is extended a general invitation to all who are interested in honoring an unselfish worker. Unless one is intimately associated with religious school work one can scarcely appraise properly the value of such effort in the smaller communities. But Miss Schoenfeld's value lies largely in her ability to draft into voluteer service which is so essential to the welfare of Judaism, men and women of highest order, including many college students. And one can glimpse the understanding leadership which is hers when one considers that these volunteers have become so closely linked with her by bonds of friendship and loyalty as to express their regard through this gathering on Sunday.

Bamberger-Fuld Philanthropy

ANOTHER outstanding contribution to American civilization is the gift of five million dollars by Louis Bamberger and his sister, Mrs. Felix Fuld of Newark, N. J., to establish an Institute of Advanced Study. It will be exclusively for post-graduate and scientific research. The purpose of the Institute is to provide the opportunity for students and recognized scientists of working together—the scientists in developing research and the students in training themselves in chosen fields. It will be co-educational, men and women being accepted without regard to race or religion. The founders have stated that it is the first institution of its kind to be established in this country. These Newark philanthropists have already given away over ten million dollars for various welfare purposes, and they have shown rare judgment in the distribution of their millions. If we recall, the Bambergers gave a sum to the Young Men's Hebrew Association of Newark about $250,000 and $500,000 was given to the Beth Israel Hospital of that city. In fact the Fulds and the Bambergers have remembered most generously Jewish and non-sectarian institutions and causes.

It was interesting to note the type of men who in behalf of some outstanding public agency are willing to give of their thought and time as their contribution to society. In this Bamberger-Fuld Foundation which will control the Institute of Advanced Learning we find Dr. Frank Aydelotte, President of Swarthmore College; Dr. Alexis Carrel, member of the Rockefeller Institute, and one of the world's greatest medical scientists; John R. Hardin, president of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, Newark, N. J.; Alanson B. Houghton, former Ambassador to Great Britain and to Germany; Lieutenant-Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York, Percy Straus, vice president of R. H. Macy; Dr. Julius Friedenwald, distinguished Baltimore physician, and other of like prominence. One can easily understand the value of such an extraordinary group of men, who have had wide experience in every phase of public service in functioning as the advisers on such a Foundation. After all, when we can find men of affairs busy men, willing to sacrifice their personal interests to help others, it is heartening. And it proves in a measure at least that men of big affairs do think of something besides adding to their fortunes. Mr. Bamberger and Mrs. Fuld are indeed to be congratulated on their magnificent gift as well as upon their good fortune in obtaining the services of such distinguished advisers to assist in carrying out their program.

Not Even a Quota

JEWISH immigration into Palestine has been closed by order of the British Government, the Mandatory for the Jewish National Homeland. No immigration quota has been set, as in the United States, Canada or South Africa. The gates of Palestine have been slammed shut. No crack or loop-hole remains open. The British Colonial Office has issued a statement to the effect that this is merely a temporary measure. A definite decision on the matter will be taken after the Simpson report shall have been rendered. The report of the closing of all immigration into Palestine has aroused world-wide resentment among Jews. Palestine Jews have called and carried out a general strike. Resolutions have been broadcast by various Zionist bodies and Agency committees in America and Europe to the British Government, protesting against this new and amazing interpretation of the Balfour Declaration. The justification set forth by the Colonial Office—that this measure is the usual procedure when findings of an investigation are being awaited—can not hold water. The accepted procedure has always been the maintenance of the status quo until such time as a final course should be decided upon.

Yet the situation with regard to Palestine is tragic not merely because of the legal immigration stoppage. Another sad fact that stands out is this: that even if the doors to Palestine were wide open the influx of Jewish pioneers would be negligible. World Jewry, while always ready to protest and demonstrate against the non-fulfilment of the Balfour Declaration by the British Government, has itself been guilty of a non-fulfilment policy. The financial support given to Palestine is not sufficient for the carrying out of the gigantic scheme of creating a Jewish Homeland. This is becoming more evident from day to day. Were the British Government extending most generous state help to the Jewish colonization work the financial burden of the Jewish Agency would be much easier, of course. Yet the present political attitude of Great Britain is such that unless those interested in the upbuilding of a Jewish Palestine can provide an extensive economic basis for the Palestine project not even the most liberal immigration rules for Palestine will solve the problem.

Random Thoughts
By Chas. H. Joseph

Judge Josiah Cohen, who died the other day in his 90th year, and active on the Bench within a week of his death, was a national figure in American Jewry. The Judge was one of the closest and dearest friends that I ever had. I know of no one who was more considerate and who would do more for a friend than the Judge. Never was a mention made of him in this column but he would immediately send me a letter of thanks in longhand. He was so appreciative of any attention shown him. And what always interested me was his alertness in keeping abreast of the news in Jewry. Every once in a while he would send down his tipstaff from the Court House in Pittsburgh to my office with a clipping in which he thought I might find material for a paragraph. In the earlier years I used to go "conventioning" and the first person I was asked about was Josiah Cohen. "How is the Judge?" and "Be sure to remember me to him when you get back to Pittsburgh," were the greetings.

—o—

In him I found one of the warmest supporters of my policies. He felt as I did regarding the increase of anti-Jewish feeling, in this country. Once, about three years ago, I had occasion to introduce him at a Goodwill meeting in Pittsburgh at which were present representative Christian clergymen, business men, bankers and others prominent in the life of the city. And he didn't hesitate to express his feelings regarding the discriminations against the Jew right in Pittsburgh. It was a bold thing to do, but in my judgment it was proper even in those circumstances. He felt deeply as a Jew. And he dedicated his efforts largely over a period of over seventy years to the advancement of JUDAISM. Racially he never considered himself a Jew but he believed with the leaders of Reform Judaism in the Jew as a religionist. One could write reams about Judge Cohen; reciting the thousands of interesting incidents in his life. How he met Lincoln when he came to Pittsburgh. How he was chosen as the orator of the occasion when General Grant visited the city. He was indeed one of the outstanding orators of the country. Like that other Jew in Wisconsin, Sol Levitan, Judge Cohen always ran ahead of his ticket for judge. Every class, the rich and the poor, the captain of industry and the worker in the ranks, the Protestant and the Catholic, all were captivated by his extraordinary personality and welcomed the opportunity to express their regard for him.

—o—

We of this generation can hardly appreciate the value of such a Jew because we can not realize that when he was in his prime there were few good English-speaking leaders in this country among our people. The German Jew was in the ascendant and most of them spoke with a decided accent. Even the Rabbis at that time with the exception of a few were rather poor pulpiteers viewing them from the standpoint of speakers. So everybody and every organization turned to Josiah Cohen to represent Jewry particularly on civic occasions. Looking back over the years I would say that his central interests, nationally speaking, were the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith and the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, which, of course, includes the Hebrew Union College. He served on the Bench for thirty years. A remarkable record. One of the loveliest, kindliest characters in American Jewish life has gone to his eternal rest. He drained the cup of life to the very last minute. He served God, man and his religion. A great man and a great Jew.

—o—

Jewish music has an appeal for at least one Gentile. His name is Harvey Gaul and he is the musical and dramatic critic of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette. Mr. Gaul told me the other day that he will soon be on his way to Palestine where he intends to spend several months to study the sources of Jewish music. And to gather all the information he can of the Palestinian Folk Music of the Jew. Mr. Gaul organized and is the director of the Choral Society of the Young Men's and oYung Women's Hebrew Association of Pittsburgh. It is interesting to know that the Choral has already given before a non-Jewish audience a program of Jewish Folk Songs and according to the newspapers it was enthusiastically received.

I received a letter from Nissim Behar, who is eighty-three years young. Some of my readers may learn a lesson from this youthful octogenarian. He writes:

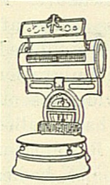

"I enjoyed reading your remarks. Only allow me to correct you when you said that I was living on a diet of chocolate bars. The late Mr. Lipson, who also wrote about me, was nearer the truth when he said that I was living on peanuts. The fact is that I am a vegetarian, during the week, but on Saturdays and other holy days when I am with friends I eat what they eat. However, regardless, I eat only one meal a day, and this is, together with the habit of eating slowly, plus cheerfulness and exercise, is the secret of what my friends call permanent youth."

This active worker living in New York is a wonderful example of how by temperate eating and indulging in daily exercise one can live to a very old age and enjoy all the vigor of men in their sixties. Nissim Behar can walk for miles and miles without the slightest fatigue. ONE MEAL A DAY and a light one at that. Dr. Harvey Wiley of the Good Housekeeping Magazine told me the same thing. Only he advocated FASTING ONE DAY every week. He did it and so did every member of his family. And Sunday was his fast day.

I listened to an extraordinary address to a graduating class last week. It was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Percy Kammerer of Pittsburgh. I have heard many speeches by many clergymen on such occasions, so I was prepared to be bored for an hour by platitudes. But he hadn't spoken a minute before I pricked up my ears. Instead of dragging a lot of stock phrases out of dusty pigeon holes he was actually urging the young men to go out in the world as liberals! He called upon them to help the minority fight the majority that wants to impose its system of thought and conduct upon others through legislation. He impaled these meddlesome reformers in CHURCHES and other organizations who were interfering with the personal liberties of others. He did not mention any names but I filled in the blanks. I could feel that he had in mind the advocates of the Blue Laws, the Fundamentalists who led the fight against the teachings of evolution in the public schools: I can also believe that without doing him an injustice he must have had in mind such fanatics as Bishop Cannon and Dr. True Wilson, who are the meddlesome busybodies trying to order the lives of everybody according to their own pattern. It was a pleasure to listen to this able leader in liberal Christian thought expose in a scathing manner those who would try to make people good through bad legislation. I understand that Dr. Kammerer is leaving the pulpit to take up the direction of a Progressive School somewhere in Connecticut. If we had more men of that type at the head of schools we would develop a nation of liberals very rapidly.

A reader in Boston writes to me in care of the "Jewish Advocate" of that city, very much excited over my attack on Bishop Cannon, Dr. Clarence True Wilson and Dr. McBride. He thinks that I ought to fight for rather than against the 18th Amendment and support these gentlemen. Aside from the fact that he believes Prohibition is a good thing he fears that once the American people begin to repeal Amendments they may decide to turn their attention to the First, which guarantees religious liberty. I can't see that. If the 18th Amendment should be repealed it will be done by the LIBERAL element in American life, the very ones who would fight to the bitter end for the preservation of the principle of religious liberty. The ones who interfere with personal liberty and who represent everything that is opposite to freedom are the Cannons and the Wilsons. Every defeat they sustain will be a victory for liberalism. Always keep that in mind. The reactionary groups in this country would make your Sunday as blue as indigo; they would regulate everything that is taught in the public schools; they would stop dancing if they could; they would oppose the use of tobacco just as they oppose the use of liquor. They would restrict every action which did not conform with their notions. No, my good friend, you need not worry that a repeal of the 18th Amendment would suggest the opportunity for the repeal of the First. Progressive men and women of this nation would repeal the 18th and would be the first to support the 18th. Whatever menace there is to religious liberty in this country comes from those who are professional Prohibitionists.

Wheeling, W. Va., isn't such a big city and the Jewish community is quite small. Yet when one considers that out of Wheeling has come Rabbi Silver, of Cleveland; Rabbi Lazaron, of Baltimore, and Rabbi Harry Levi, of Boston, one begins to realize the value of the Jewish pulpit in that small city. I am prompted to make these remarks by the announcement that Temple Israel of Boston has elected its Rabbi for life, the first time that such action has ever been taken by a Jewish congregation of that city. Rabbi Levi has proven himself not only a Rabbi of outstanding ability, who has brought his congregation to the position of being one of the largest and most influential in the United States, but he has revealed qualities of civic leadership that have made him an influence in the public life of New England.

GOVERNMENT FROWNS ON GOOD-WILL BODY

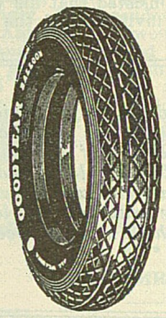

Jerusalem.—The Palestine Government has rejected the petition for a charter to the Ahabath Poalim, an organization designed to promote good will between Arab and Jewish workers in Palestine. The group, headed by Dr. Hugo Bergmann, Librarian of the Hebrew University, stands on a platform emphasizing pacifism and opposing imperialism. Dr. Bergmann is also a leading figure in the B'rith Sholom.

ENGLAND SENDS FELICITATIONS

We feel a bit cocky. An English seedsman called on us recently and volunteered the information that we have the cleanest, most beautiful and best arranged seed store that he has ever seen. This man is a representative of London's greatest seed house. He knows his seed stores so why shouldn't we feel congratulated?

There is a deal of satisfaction to Beckert's in knowing that we have kept faith with our many loyal customers and are able to offer them today not only pleasant business surroundings but the best merchandise and service that can be found anywhere in our line.

A suggestion—drop in and pass judgment on the Englishman's opinion next time you come this way.

The "Red-Head of Bucharest"

The Jewess for Whom a King Left His Throne

By RENEE STRAUS

PARIS:—The curtain has descended on the last act of King Carol's romance. The love idyll of a royal prince and the daughter of a Jewish banker has come to an end. No more will the beautiful auburn-haired Magda Lupescu, riding along the Champs Elysees in a luxurious motor car or adorning a box at the opera, be pointed out as the woman for whom a king sacrificed his throne. While the newly crowned King of Rumania acknowledges the ovations of an enthusiastic populace a stately woman, clad in mourning against which her white face and flaming crown of red hair stand out in sharp relief, laments the inconstancy of royal love as she sits alone in a Swiss or Australian hotel.

Paris, the world metropolis which gave brith to the famous proverb "Cherchez la femme," is much more concerned these days with the woman King Carol loved and left than with the political coup de theatre of the Carolists. In this age of naval armaments and the triumph of machine over man the great love of the former Rumanian Crown Prince for the attractive Mme. Lupescu stands out as the last royal romance of an epoch that is fast disappearing.

Only a few weeks ago, in a chateau at Neuilly, Prince Carol and Mme. Lupescu were lavishly entertaining the elite of French society. In the mansion of the Crown Prince who seemed destined never to become King the beautiful Rumanian Jewess was a most charming hostess and surrounded the handsome son of the late King Ferdinand with all the comforts and pleasures of a real home. Visitors to the Neuilly chateau would smile knowingly as they left and would whisper: "No wonder Prince Carol sacrificed the throne of a Balkan domain for this paradise on earth which Mme. Lupescu has created for him in France.

But what only yesterday bid fair to be a permanent honeymoon today belongs to the distant past. The flighty Prince Carol, who preferred being one of the many in Paris to becoming the first lord of Rumania and who so often had told the emissaries of his royal father that love without a crown is better than a crown without love, has abandoned his companion in exile in rather hasty fashion. Now he is the stern, inaccessible ruler of the Kingdom of Rumania. (Though some cynics ask: For how long?)

The romance of Carol and Magda is a drama in four acts. It was told to me by a close friend of Mme. Lupescu, and is as thrilling as any one of the many romantic scenarios and plays that have been spun about the loves of princes.

ACT ONE: An evening lawn party given by the late King Ferdinand at the royal palace near Bucharest. Prominent members of the Bucharest bourgeoisie were invited, among them the Jewish financier Wolf and his daughter, the beautiful twelve-year-old Magda. Carol, then a handsome boy of fifteen, met the Jewish girl. They promenaded in the royal park under the romantic illumination of Japanese lanterns. The impetus boy fell in love with the red-haired, blue-eyed child. It was noticed that they danced all the quadrilles together. Queen Marie did not like it very much. She looked up her guest list; and when she realized that the auburn-haired beauty was the daughter of a Jewish banker she liked it still less. It was explained to Carol that etiquette demanded that the future King change partners for every dance. But the Crown Prince objected, and it is reported that he ran away to his study to sulk, thus making a rather unconventional exit from the royal garden party.

ACT TWO: About five years later. At a military horse show some one introduced Carol to the wife of Major Lupescu. The moment he saw the stately red-haired, blue-eyed beauty he remembered.

"Havent we met before, under Japanese lanterns?" the Crown Prince asked smiling.

Mme. Lupescu, nee Wolf, blushed and, it is said, murmured the prophetic words: "Yes, on an evening when you ran away from me."

The twenty-year-old prince complimented Major Lupescu on his charming wife and insisted on taking the attractive young woman around the show. "To make up for my hasty departure five years ago," he said, and everybody laughed—everybody, that is, except Magda Lupescu, who had been in love with her Prince ever since that fateful royal garden party. Prince Carol had the reputation of being a ladies' man He was tall, athletically built and utterly disregardful of his high rank. His unconventionality made him a favorite among the fast set of Bucharest and earned him the title of the "Rumanian Don Juan." Major Lupescu's wife knew this from hearsay, and when the dashing royal Prince showered flowery compliments upon her she remained silent. He invited her to attend one of his soirees, but she refused. The persistent Carol, however, appealed to the Major, who insisted that his wife should accept the invitation of the future King. Mme. Lupescue finally accepted. But in a few days she left for Paris. It is said that Prince Carol fell head over heels in love with the red-haired beauty who had snubbed him right then and there. That she might have run away because she loved him did not occur to him.

ACT THREE: Another five years have passed The Crown Prince had just returned from Russia, where he had married a daughter of a Rumanian nobleman This marriage was annulled; Queen Marie had different plans for her son A political alliance with Greece appeared desirable The alliance between Prince Carol and Princess Helen, daughter of the Greek King, was arranged and duly carried out The flighty Don Juan of Rumania seemed to have settled down; the state and the throne had tamed him, it was thought There were rumors, of course, that the Crown Prince was still giving intimate soirees attended by the elite of Bucharest womanhood and the pick of the city's cavaliers, but Queen Marie, the energetic spouse of the late King Ferdinand, was holding her erratic son in hand—until he met, for the third time, Mme Lupescu, acknowledged one of Rumanias most beautiful women Magda Lupescu had been trying to forget her Prince. She had herself become a leader of the fast set. Her beauty had reached its apex; she was called the "Titian Lady," for her red hair and translucent white complexion seemed as if taken from one of the masterpieces of the immortal Italian painter Titian.

When the Prince and the "Titian Lady" met for the third time their fate was sealed. "What chance has a cold Grecian beauty against a Titian Lady?" whispered those in the know Throne and Greek alliance were thrown overboard. The Prince and the wife of Major Lupescu eloped to France. "The only crown I ever want to wear is the Titian hair of my love," the Prince is reported to have replied to Queen Marie's messages telling him that all would be forgiven if he would return home.

ACT FOUR: The royal idyll between Prince Carol and Magda Lupescu had been the talk of Europe for almost five years. Their love nests in Paris and near London had been described by all journalists in search of true romance.

Rumanian state affairs are in a turmoil. The regime of the boy King Michael, a sweet, charming child, has become a standing joke in all the chancelries of Europe. Professor Jorga, one time teacher of Prince Carol, visits him in his Neuilly chateau and urges him to save the Rumanian dynasty. All-night conferences are held. Special messengers fly between Paris and Bucharest. One sunny morning Magda Lupescu's Prince Charming steps into an airplane and recaptures the throne of Rumania. The rest is history in the making. Mme. Lupescu, in her empty chateau, repeats her lamentation of fifteen years before: "He ran away from me" The curtain has fallen quickly. The romance is ended.

Yet the fame of Magda Wolf may outlive that of Carol just as the names of Mme. du Barry and Ninon Lenclos, the immortal French courtesans, are still remembered while the numbers distinguishing their royal friends have become more or less lost in the maze of the many Louises of France. Some who are close to Magda smile and suggest that the epilogue of this great romance is yet to be written. It would surprise no one, they say, if Mme. Lupescu were suddenly to make a dramatic appearance in Bucharest and to resume in some manner her companionship with King Don Juan of Rumania. Others, again, hint that King Carol may tire of his royal duties one fine day and again exchange his heavy crown of gold for the silken hair of the "Titian Lady." And still others believe that Mme. Lupescu will retire into permanent mourning in a convent—for she is said to have become a convert to Catholicism years ago.

But whatever the epilogue, Magda Lupescue, nee Wolf, will go down in history as the most famous courtesan of the early twentieth century.

The dramatic ascension of Carol II to the throne of Rumania recalls his romance with Mme. Magda Lupescu, nee Wolf, daughter of a Bucharest Jew, variously described as a junk dealer, cobbler or banker. The Paris correspondent of the Seven Arts and The Jewish Criterion here tells, in her inimitable way, of the love idyll between a prince and a Jewess which has just been brought to an end.

REVIEW OF THE JEWISH WEEK

By JOSEPH SALMARK

CLEVELAND, 1930

Another Zionist convention is approaching. Delegates from all over the country are preparing to assemble in Cleveland to review and deliberate upon the record and decide on the fate of the Zionist Organization of America. During the last year Zionist domestic politics have been overshadowed by events of World Zionist importance in Palestine, London and Geneva. The August riots and their aftermath, the Shaw Commission, the British White Paper, the various Arab delegations, the Simpson investigation and the sessions of the Permanent Mandates Commission have held the Zionists of America, as those of other countries, in a state of perpetual excitement. Little time, indeed, was left for preparations and manoeuvers for the impending battle of domestic politics. The Brandeis memorandum, which must be considered an ultimatum to the convention delegates, will be the piece de resistance at the Cleveland conclave which is to begin on the 29th of this month. One can not refrain from expressing the hope that the convention, conscious of its dignity, will rise above petty personal alignments. Palestine as a solution to the constantly aggravated Jewish tragedy is at stake The delegates will have to remember that, whatever fault one may find with the weather-beaten pilot, Louis Lipsky, he has navigated the American Zionist bark through heavy seas. The Jewish Agency has been achieved despite the guerilla warfare of the so-called opposition, which today is ready to accept it. The American share of the Palestine budget has been delivered to Eretz Israel despite the interminable chain of obstacles that confronted the Keren Hayesod and, later, the United Palestine Appeal. Notwithstanding all the—not totally unjustified—criticism hurled at it the regime which came into power at Cleveland in 1921 has a rather impressive record to submit to the Cleveland convention of 1930. On the other hand, Brandeis and his followers are personalities who can not be suspected of having at heart interests other than those of the Zionist cause. Personalities always play a great part in history. But to bandy about its all too few idealistic leaders and thus to risk their loss is a luxury which Zionism can not afford. If the Cleveland convention will realize that it should consider not the question of Lipsky or Brandeis but that of Lipsky and Brandeis it will become of historic importance to the Zionist cause. That is the view of true neutrals interested in the upbuilding of a Jewish Palestine.

THERE IS HOPE

The new King of Rumania seems to have acquired a democratic education during his five years of exile in Europe. In an interview with foreign correspondents Carol II is reported as having stated: "There are anti-Semites in Rumania as there are in every other country, but my Government will not support them. . . . .I wish to assure all minorities in the country that they will receive equal treatment and that their interests will be safeguarded." While royal statements on the morn of ascension to the throne should always be taken with a grain of salt, the declaration of King Carol has the genuine tone of sincerity. During his exile he has come in contact with many representatives of world Jewry in the realms of finance, art and science. It must also be remembered that his former tutor, Professor Jorga, seems to have set his mind on stamping out anti-Semitism, as a political weapon, at least, in his country. And—last, but perhaps not least—one may be permitted to whisper that the friend of the romantic King of Rumania, the auburn-haired Jewess Madame Lupescu, also may have contributed toward the destroying of any prejudice which the present ruler of Rumania may have had against the Semitic race. All in all, the return of Carol augurs well for the Rumanian Jewish situation.

A NON-SECTARIAN JEWISH ENDOWMENT

Louis Bamberger, retired Newark merchant, and Mrs. Felix Fuld, his sister, have announced the donation of an endowment fund of five million dollars for the establishment of an Institute of Advanced Study. The school will be non-sectarian in both faculty and student body. This in the wake of the increasingly disturbing reports of racial discrimination in American universities and other institutions of learning. This following closely on the vicious report of Dr. Clarence True Wilson, Secretary of the Methodist Board, charging Jews with carrying on a sectarian national political policy. The Bamberger endowment announcement will be hailed with great joy by all liberal forces in the United States. There are, of course, those who clamor that the Bambergers should have endowed a strictly Jewish institute of learning, so as to counteract anti-Jewish discrimination in many American universities. But such views must be qualified as ultra-fanatic. The American Jew does not demand special privilege; nor does he welcome a separatist racial educational policy. He insists only on a strictly non-sectarian attitude on the part of institutions of learning. The Bambergers, realizing that two wrongs do not make a right, have rendered a great service to America. It would have been a strange way indeed of demonstrating the justice of Jewish demands for a liberal policy in the American universities if they had endowed a Jewish sectarian institute. Through their endowment of their "super-university' Louis Bamberger and his sister have given one more warning to the reactionary forces in this country that anti-Semitism and prejudice must keep their hands off education and learning.

EXIT MR. LUKE

Mr. H. C. Luke, erstwhile Secretary of the Palestine Government and Acting High Commissioner during the Black August of 1929, has been appointed Governor of Malta. Thus the man who, despite the whitewashing of the Palestine Inquiry Commission's report, is in many quarters regarded as more responsible than any other individual for the bloodshed of the Palestine riots is leaving his post in that country. His departure will not be regretted. As a matter of fact the British Colonial Office has earned the gratitude of the Palestine Jewish population and of world Jewry by removing a Palestine official who would have been a great obstacle to the cementing of friendlier relations between Arabs and Jews. If Mr. Luke's going to Malta means the beginning of a house-cleaning in Palestine officialdom it means a step forward in the normalization of the Jewish situation in Palestine.

REPORT 61,000 REFORM JEWS IN UNITED STATES

Atlantic City, N. J.—There are 61,662 members in the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, Reform Jewish body, according to a report of Rabbi George Zepin, secretary of the Union, submitted to a meeting of the executive committee here. The meeting was devoted to a consideration of financial problems primarily. It was stated that the income for the fiscal year will be about $630,000. This money is used for maintaining the Hebrew Union College and Synagogue and school extension work as well as for the employment of field rabbis. Ludwig Vogelstein, chairman of the committee, recommended the employment of eight new field rabbis to act as "circuit riders" throughout the country where there are small Jewish communities which cannot afford rabbis of their own.

NEW EDITION OF AN OLD MASTER

(Dr. Graesler, by Arthur Schnitzler. Simon & Schuster.)

It has always been a matter of wonder to me that between Jacob Wassermann and Arthur Schnitzler, the former should enjoy a greater vogue in this country. It can only be explained on the ground that Wassermann's heavy bludgeoning and intricate morbidity seem more closely related to the "classic' and enduring in literature than the delicate irony and limpid clarity of which Schnitzler has always been an exponent. Dark, brooding thoughts are so often confused with eternal truths and inner conviction, while emotions that are quickly brought to the surface are dismissed as superficial and evanescent.

But Wassermann with all his abstruse, introspective probing into the souls of his variegated realm of characters has not been more penetrating than Schnitzler in "Dr. Graesler," for example. "Dr. Graesler" appeared in English seven years ago. But in those days he was an esoteric author, to be enjoyed by a few thousand fortunates who had just begun to hear of him, although three or four of Schnitzler's things, particularly some playlets, had already been published. Despite the fact that Schnitzler is essentially of the pre-war period, his name did not circulate to any extent in the United States until after the war.

But in 1930 Schnitzler's name has reached a radius of twenty-five thousand names, who may buy or borrow his books. The increase in his fame is due to a very large extent to Simon & Schuster, who have been consistently attacked as the panders of the publishing world. But whatever they have done that is purely commercial is completely atoned for by the publication of Schnitzler, Franz Werfel and Felix Salten.

In "Dr. Graesler" Schnitzler has a theme whose variations he has woven into many another of his novelettes. Dr. Graesler, for many years a ship's surgeon, has retired to become a physician for summer and winter health resorts. Living with his old maid sister for many years, he is suddenly shaken to his depths when she commits suicide. That incident stirs his moribund sensibilities. Gradually he begins to appreciate that during his entire life he has been insulated from the world at large and from his own emotions.

Three women come into his life in rapid succession. The one who considers him priggish, vain and inconsiderate, but who is willing to marry him. The very same Sabine that Schnitzler has chosen for this girl might be an ironic reference to the Sabine women who had to be forced. The second was Katharine, a middle-class working girl who became his mistress because she had a genuine affection for his gentleness to her. The third was a woman, with whom he had come in contact when her child became ill with scarlet fever.

Indecisiveness has been the keynote of Groesler's life. Always drifting he found it difficult to adjust himself to another personality, until in rapid succession he lost Sabine and Katharine. But finally he realizes that all he has wanted and needed was to break his insualation, to make contact with the human element of his surroundings. The widow, with her deep respect, and the child, with her keen joy in the doctor's stories of his travels, were admirably adapted to become his wife and daughter.

In Schnitzler's characters, motives are never so deeply hidden that there is a constant struggle between author and reader to suppress and discover them. Schnitzler, with a tenth of the effort expended by Wassermann, gives his men and women a solidity and reality which Wassermann rarely does.

A PHILOSOPHER RAMBLES

(Indecency and the Seven Arts, by Horace M. Kallen. Horace Liveright.)

Horace M. Kallen, noted philosopher, has collected eleven assorted fragments that have appeared in various magazines touching upon innumerable subjects and has collected them into a volume that has neither continuity nor eloquence. The leading essay is "Indecency and the the Seven Arts," from which the volume takes its title. The ten other items are banded together in the subtitle "And Other Adventures of a Pragmatist in Aesthetics."

The essential difficulty with the majority of his present essays is that there is an abortive attempt to combine philosophic earnestness and intellectual satire. The result is a somewhat sorry mixture. The title essay, for example, is a disquisition on the futility of censorship in all its forms. Using the quite ancient suppression of Cabell's "Jurgen" as the pretext for his essay, Kallen follows with a rambling account of the attempt to keep down thought, in religion or in literature. The panacea for the eternal desire to censor is to be found soon in science, Kallen believes. When science overtakes superstition there will arise "a new common sense and pointing to a vision of life more secure, more serene, more self-acquiescent than the Christians." Kallen concludes with a prettily moral injunction to the artist that he should "so glorify" the theme that "awakens the sense of shame" that "the little hurt will be consumed in the great joy."

Most of what Kallen has to say in this volume is repetitions. The only excuse for calling himself a "pragmatist in aesthetics" is that he often refers to art in its applied forms. It can only be explained as a defense mechanism that he should have included a chapter on "Style and Meaning," in which he states that a word is important in realtion to "the rhythmic idiosyncrasy of its movement." But despite that beautiful phrase, Kallen employs a style that is often irritating and precious. He often selects words as though merely for the purpose of startling, jarring the reader. He has succeeded very well, but not to his benefit.

FOR YOUTH

(Introduction to Judaism, by Beryl D. Cohon. Bloch Publishing Company,)

Most of the textbooks that clutter up the Jewish Sunday schools of the country have no appreciation either of the subject matter that they are supposed to discuss or of the manner in which it is to be presented. Usually dry and pedantic, they can leave no permanent impression on the young boy or girl who is trying to obtain an understanding of the Jewish religion.

It is, therefore, a unique experience to be able to recommend a volume like "Introduction to Judaism," written by Beryl D. Cohon, a young rabbi. It is intended for the Jewish youth and—setting a precedent—is actually adapted to their needs. In the first place, it is written in a simple, unaffected English, containing no saccharine condescension to the child mind. In the second place, it approaches the ideals of Judaism in a manner that is neither bigoted nor pompous.

Divided into three sections, it discusses the sources of Judaism, its ideals and its institutions. There is a proper avoidance of lengthy definitions and intricate details. At the same time Cohon has emphasized the human qualities which animate Judaism. The book is brief but covers the ground quite adequately. At the moment it suggests itself as the best volume for children between ten and fourteen that has appeared.

Pittsburgh Jewry Honors Memory of Judge Josiah Cohen

Pittsburgh Jewry in Mass Meeting assembled at the Y. M. & Y. W. H. A. Sunday evening, June 15, expressed its profound grief at the death of the Honorable Josiah Cohen.

A most highly respected member of the judiciary, he rendered unsurpassed service to the entire community for many years. One of the foremost leaders in every field of communal endeavor, he was ever mindful of his duty to the Jewish people. A lover of his people, whether in the United States, England, Russia or Palestine, he was devoted to every cause, philanthropic, religious or educational, that enriched the spiritual life of his people. His very last public act of generous support to the Allied Jewish Campaign was a noble expression of his deep interest in the Jewish renaissance throughout the world; in the union of all American Jewry, in the reconstruction of Jewish life in Eastern Europe, and in the establishment of a Jewish National Homeland in Palestine, in the spirit of Israel's prophets of old.

May we here assembled honor his memory by our increased devotion to the ideals that were dear to him, by our unstinted service to the community and to the Jewish people!

May his beloved wife find consolation in the immortality of his memory in the hearts of his people!

Mass Meeting Adopts Palestine Immigration and Judge Cohen Memorial Resolutions

Sixty leading Jewish organizations of Pittsburgh were represented at a public mass meeting held Sunday evening, June 15, at the Y. M. & W. H. A. Auditorium in protest against the British suspension of Jewish Labor immigration into Palestine and the recent White Paper.

Rabbi Herman Hailperin was introduced as the chairman of the evening by Mr. Emil Steinbach, chairman of the Arrangements Committee.

Rabbi Sivitz, as dean of the Pittsburgh Rabbinate, made a few introductory remarks.

Charles H. Cowan, New York lawyer and educator, Member, National Zionist Executive Committee, delivered a stirring address in English.

Berl Locker, Member of the World Zionist Executive and Secretary of the World Poale Zion Organization, addressed the meeting in Yiddish.

Samuel L. Fuss, Chairman of the Resolutions Committee, presented a resolution in honor of the memory of the late Judge Josiah Cohen and the resolution expressing the protest of the assembly against the British suspension of Jewish Labor immigration into Palestine and the White Paper.

The Resolutions unanimously adopted read as follows:

WHEREAS, the peoples of the world organized in the League of Nations, and the United States of America, have recognized the historical right of the Jewish people to a Jewish National Homeland in Palestine, and

WHEREAS, Great Britain has accepted the Palestine Mandate and thereby assumed the responsibility, in behalf of the civilized world, of facilitating "the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people," and

WHEREAS, Jewish immigration into Palestine is essential to the upbuilding of the Jewish National Homeland in Palestine, and

WHEREAS, the British Colonial Office, recently suspended the issuance of immigration certificates to Jewish laborers, after the High Commissioner of Palestine had approved the certificates as beneficial to the economic development of the country, and

WHEREAS, the White Paper recently submitted by the British Government to the Mandates Commission of the League of Nations, indicates tendencies towards land and immigration policies which may undermine the very foundation of the Palestine Mandate and endanger the future of the Jewish National Home,

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, by Pittsburgh Jewry, in Mass Meeting assembled at the Y. M. & Y. W. H. A., Sunday evening, June 15, 1930,

1. That we view with anxiety the suspension of Jewish labor immigration into Palestine, even though temporary,

2. That we protest against such a suspension as detrimental to the internationally recognized aspirations of the Jewish people for the upbuilding of a Jewish National Homeland in Palestine, and in violation of the solemn obligation of Great Britain under the Palestine Mandate,

3. That we therefore appeal to Great Britain to fulfill loyally the obligations assumed in the Mandate, by permitting free Jewish immigration into Palestine, by encouraging Jewish settlement upon the land and development of the natural resources of the country, and by placing the administration of Palestine in the hands of such officials as are in sympathy with the aims and purposes of the Mandate and the Balfour Declaration.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a copy of the foregoing Resolutions be forwarded to His Excellency, The British Ambassador at Washington, and to the press.

Jurist, Altruist and Philanthropist

A Tribute by Bernard M. Goldsmith

The echoes of the many beautiful tributes and eulogies at the passing of one of God's great noblemen, Honorable Judge Josiah Cohen, are still reverberating the hearts and souls of thousands upon thousands. These are caught up in turn by the subdued sobs and suppressed sighs of untold numbers of widows and orphans, whose sufferings were alleviated and successful careers made possible by his and his good wife's generosity and personal interest in their welfare. These are facts well known in spite of the exceeding modesty and considerateness of this noble pair, who went about doing good for the community in particular and the needy at large, during a period of half a century or more. It was the good fortune of the writer of these lines to know them intimately for this entire period of time and to note the results of their diversified activities. More especially for the past twenty-five years, during which time he was first associated with them in the care of lovely children bereft of their parents.

On the occasion of the seventieth birthday of the Judge I called him, in a poem dedicated to him in the words of the Psalmist, "Ave Yesomim ve dayon Allumnis," the father of the orphans and protector of the widows, which pleased him very much and to which endearing appellation he was entitled to the very last.

But of late years I had the opportunity of seeing his nobility of character and kindness of heart almost daily towards the poor floatsam and jitsam of Society, the alleged criminal element. He considered them as sick children and treated them like such.

All our Judges tempered Justice with mercy in sentencing those convicted for some crime, but Judge Josiah Cohen had the gift of impressing upon the victim the enormity of the crime, without sermonizing and winning the heart of the sentenced, who realized that they were treated like human beings and whether sentenced or paroled they resolved to reform their lives in appreciation of this treatment.

Judge Josiah Cohen showed great consideration for the attaches of the Court and the comfort of the Jurors, but was especially solicitous for the young attorney whom he guided with gentle hand and speech towards right point of Law and procedure. He permitted no attorney to take advantage of his opponent's neglecting a point through lack of practice and never left the Bench while either side was arguing before the Jury.

His greatest Joy, however, was when one of the graduates of the Orphanage, who was admitted to the Bar, would appear before him as Counsel either for the Defense or the Commonwealth. He would then call up the writer to the Bench or into his Chamber and recall many happy incidents associated with the Home, and would feel happy when I would conscientiously attribute much of their Success to the Inspiration he was to the children of the Home, by his example and precept exacting from them "walking" straight, throw your shoulders back and look the world straight in the face!

In conclusion we may find consolation in the thought that his Life was full of practical lessons, altruistic acts and encouragement to many and above all that these influences will be continued to be exerted upon us by the blessed Life of his Good Wife for whose health and comfort a prayer will ascend to the Giver of Life and Peace from thousands of Loving hearts and Souls.

Although Birth and death are the limits of our existence, we know perfectly well that we have not risen from nothingness, and that in the same way that we originated from priod conditions and are the continuation of former soul Life—so we are not annihilated in Death and shall continue in the Life of the generations to come.

Neither is Birth an absolute beginning nor Dealth an absolute finality. Every individual is the link in the great chain of the whole life of Mankind.

THE SPORTS GLOBE

A Column of Local News
By AL ABRAMS

The tainted result of the Schmeling-Sharkey title bout has caused a shadow to cross the boxing horizon that will be hard to wipe out, but in all fairness to the principals in the contest, the whole thing was purely accidental.

* * * * *

Sharkey, much maligned by the boxing fates, has a jinx that he has failed to conquer in the last three years. Well on the way to the title in his bout with the German, an unintentional low blow once again raised a big barrier before the Boston Gob.

* * * * *

Schmeling was little to blame, although in some quarters his gameness was questioned when he refused to continue with the battle. This, however, was out of reason, as those who know will tell you that such a low blow, causes excruciating pain that lasts for hours.

* * * * *

The upshot of it all is, that Schmeling should be recognized as champion as agreed upon before the bout. This may be denied him, but, whether he was the best man or not, in all due fairness, he must be awarded the champoinship crown for the time being.

* * * * *

With boxing in a continual turmoil from one raw decision and fight after another, and baseball still on the skids both locally and elsewhere, it is no wonder that golf and tennis have made rapid inroads into the popularity of these two sports.

* * * * *

Heated arguments have filled the air in "The Dugout," popular rendezvous of the men about town, ever since the Sharkey-Schmeling thing. So far, it is hard to decide the winner, as both sides have claimed victory with foul decisions reserved.

* * * * *

Of more than passing interest will be the fight between George Godfrey, gigantic negro, and Primo Carnera, Italy's man mountain, in Philadelphia soon. The victor of this big bout will have to be recognized as more than a threat, and should be given real consideration when title bouts are being passed around freely.

* * * * *

Should Carnera topple over the big negro it will make him the outstanding contender for the crown which adorns the Schmelling brow? ? If Godfrey comes through we hope that he gets more than the run-around this time.

* * * * *

Those who called Barney Dreyfuss a shylock last year for the deal, which sent the apparently then useless Glenn Wright to Brooklyn for Jess Petty are singing a different tune this year.

* * * * *

Now they're wondering whether Uncle Robbie didn't pull a fast one on our Barney. Wright, until recently injured, was going like a house afire, making the Dodgers a real pennant threat, while Petty has been practically of little or no use to the local outfit and was recently released.

* * * * *

Encouraging reports are being received that Lloyd Waner, little Pirate centerfielder, will be able to play this year. A late story states that the Sprout is tipping the scales at 153 pounds, a heavyweight mark for the little fellow who at his best playing weight never passed the 147 figure.

* * * * *

The Pirate outfield is a sorry one without the younger Waner. His bat, which rattled around the .350 mark, and his speed on the bases, which brought in many runs, are missed considerably, but above this all, there are few outfielders in the majors that can go as far back, or on either side, to shag flies as Little Poison can.

* * * * *

Helen Wills remains the queen of the courts, and her rein appears a permanent one. Queen Helen—or rather Mrs. Moody—should be at the top of her game for the next five years and possibly longer.

* * * * *

Pittsburgh will be the cynosure of all eyes in the golfing world on Monday when the National Intercollegiate tourney will be staged on the beautiful Oakmont course.

* * * * *

This town has gone to the dogs. With two tracks running at Bridgeville and New Kensington, local fans have been offered a novel sport and they have taken to it in a pleasing manner. Large daily crowds are in attendance at the two tracks nightly.

* * * * *

We're wondering what will happen to the seventy and eighty thousand fight crowds of the present era if the television machine is perfected that will bring the big bouts to your parlor with both sound and sight. This might come in time over the dead bodies of a lot of promoters.

* * * * *

What Jack Sharkey and his handlers thought was a master stroke turned out to be a fizzle, when the Boston Gob stepped into the ring against Schmelling draped in a large American flag. Instead of the expected cheers, Jack was greeted with a round of razzberries that shook the rafters and put the Sailor in a sourer frame of mind, if that was possible.

Southwestern District of Pennsylvania, Jewish Religious Schools Committee

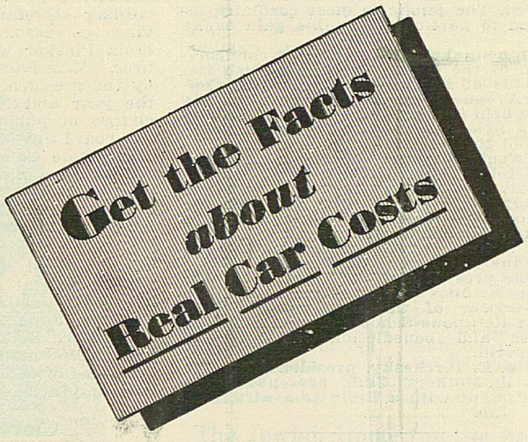

Two confirmations were held on Sunday, June 15, which marked the close of a most successful confirmation season for the Southwestern District. In the afternoon at the B'nai Israel Synagogue, twenty-seven children from the Ambridge, Carnegie, Ford City, Homewood, South Side and West End Religious Schools were jointly confirmed by Rabbi Benjamin A. Lichter. The services were most inspiring, and a large and enthusiastic audience attended. Another confirmation was held in the evening at the Beth Jehuda Synagogue, where twelve children of the Beth Jehuda Religious School were confirmed by Rabbi Herman Hailperin.

Presidents of Mothers' Clubs, Sisterhoods and Councils under our supervision are kindly asked to respond at once to the letters concerning their religious schools.

Attention is again called to the fact that office hours are from nine to twelve in the morning and from one to five in the afternoon, every week day.

Miriam Schonfield Day

Final arrangements have been completed for the Celebration of "Miriam Schonfield Day" at the Hotel Schenley on Sunday afternoon, June 22nd, and all indications point to a brilliant social function. The enthusiasm manifested in this district as well as in distant cities indicates clearly the warm place Miss Schonfield holds in the hearts of thousands and most of these will welcome the opportunity thus afforded of paying homage to one who has for years unselfishly devoted all of her time and effort to the education of the Jewish Youth and played such an auspicious part in the activities of so many social and beneficial agencies in this district.

Miriam Schonfield

June 22nd, designated as "Miriam Schonfield Day," marks the close of yet another year of untiring effort and outstanding accomplishment on her part and has proved to be the most successful year in the history of her community work. It was, therefore, most fitting that this day be set aside in her honor, for, in making arrangments for the affair, it was the purpose of her friends to merely afford the facilities for the display of the deep appreciation and sincere gratitude that is bound to be lavished upon this dearly beloved individual for her distinguished achievements of the past.

The countless friends whom Miss Schonfield has made during these years of devoted service will assemble en masse and we are certain that Miss Schonfield will enjoy the opportunity of greeting them individually.

The Reception Tea will be held in the Ballroom of the Hotel Schenley on Sunday afternoon, June 22nd, from three to five o'clock and will be an open affair.

A most cordial invitation to attend is extended to all of Miss Schonfield's friends. Be with us and help celebrate "Miriam Schonfield Day."

ENTHUSIASM REIGNS SUPREME FOR JUNIOR COUNCIL DANCE

Was our hint last week sufficient? In other words, did the invitations please you? The Committee personally thinks it deserves more than a little adulation for its brain-child, and they promise that this invitation is but the forerunner of plans for the most colorful and lavish affair of the summer season. We are told that Junior Council festivities are quite the thing in these parts, but it looks as if this particular bit of summer gaiety will even surpass the many scintillating embroglios which these damsels have created. Another tempting morsel is in the offing for your discriminating palate.

The Maitre of Oakmont's exclusive night club, bordering on the peaceful waters of the Allegheny, is seriously considering the erection of a marquee over those waters to make additional place for the throngs of eager guests who are planning to drown their troubles in a sea of rippling fun at Junior Council's Summer Dance at the Willows on Tuesday evening, July first.

Of course, you are included among the group who are to join this revelry and have sent your reservation to Mrs. Harry Epstein, Chairman of Reservations.

Miss Sylvia Wechsler

Miss Katherine DeRoy

Mrs. Epstein tells us that she has summoned to her aid a card index and an entire army of sharpened pencils so she's ready for you to pile more work on her by sending in your reservations to her at 5552 Bartlett Street, together with self-addressed stamped envelope. She will even hold tickets for you if you 'phone her at Hazel 3995.

Roy Ingram and his Paramount Theatre Orchestra have an entire repertoire of new dance numbers for us and he will include any old favorite that you desire, though I imagine he will draw the line at "She's More To Be Pitied Than Scorned" or "Only a Boid in a Gilded Cage." From his point of vantage in the Paramount Theatre in New York City, he will have all the latest theme songs to present for your approval and "talkie" jazz is coming in so thick and fast these days that Roy Ingram will have a varied program to intrigue us. Be certain to practice up your dancing, and be sure to ask your man early so that some other siren will not have him to entice, for you know how romantic the Willows' setting is, what with soft lights on the shining river and a soft summer night breathing nothing but romance. In fact, if we feel particularly benign, we might order a glowing harvest moon, or perhaps one of those slender silver crescents that are synonymous with youth.

Although a spirit of gaity and festivity will prevail, the Juniors are not neglecting their serious purpose, because they are planning to add the material benefits of this party to the Trust Fund, which is now being augmented for a specific purpose, the secret of which will soon be divulged.

Miss Sylvia A. Wechsler, Chairman, and her Dance Committee, Miss Katherine DeRoy, Miss Leora Osgood, Mrs. Harry Epstein and Miss Yetta Goldberg, are working fast and furiously to make Tuesday evening, July 1, a banner evening in your crowded lives. The only effort that you have to make is to send in your reservation to Mrs. Harry Epstein, 5552 Bartlett Street. And remember, that the date is July 1; the place is The Willows in Oakmont; and the cast of characters comprises Roy Ingram's Paramount Theatre Orchestra, you and your chosen man!

Senior Council Invited

Members of the Pittsburgh Section, National Council of Jewish Women, are cordially invited to attend the Juniors' Summer Dance—reservations can be made with Mrs. Harry Epstein, 5552 Bartlett Street. The Juniors are looking forward to seeing many Seniors on July 1st and will accord them a hearty welcome.

Hadassah Appoints Delegates to Two Important Conventions

Mrs. Julius Cohen of Pittsburgh, regional chairman of the Hadassah, was the speaker at the meeting of the McKeesport chapter at the home of the president, Mrs. Jacob Zeiger of Madison Avenue. In response to her talk urging that delegates attend the conventions of affiliated Jewish organizations in order to obtain the best results and keep pace with the work and progress, the local group voted to send delegates to two such meetings. Mrs. Charles Friedman was elected delegate to the Zionist convention which will open in Cleveland, June 29, for a three-day session and Mrs. Zeiger will attend the Hadassah convention this fall, the definite place and time for which has not yet been decided.

Covering the entire Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia district, the region of the Hadassah activities over which Mrs. Cohen presides is an active and important one and the work and plans of the organization were discussed by the speaker last night. She outlined the purposes of the Hadassah, the manner in which its money is spent and the good accomplished, and related many incidents of interest in connection with the work.

This was the first regular session at which the new president, Mrs. Zeiger, presided, and she announced a board meeting for the near future at which time standing committees for the year would be appointed. The chapter will not meet again until Mrs. Friedman returns from the Zionist meeting at which time she will submit a report on the various sessions.

Jewish National Fund Flower day was held on June 8, with Miss Irene Ruderman, chairman, assisted by the Misses Claudia Amper, Sylvia Levy, Marian Kimmelman, Celia Reisberg, Pearl Rosen, Lillian Siegel, Lillian Weiss, Violet Zeiger, Dorothy Zeiger, and by Mesdames Max Lebowitz, Harry Siegel. Mrs. Jacob Zeiger, president of the McKeesport chapter of Hadassah, wishes to take this means of thanking Miss Ruderman and her aides for their efforts in making this event a success.

Sisterhood Adath Jeshurun

One of the most successful years, both socially and financially, of the Sisterhood Adath Jeshurun, came to a close on Wednesday afternoon, June 11, with a luncheon to celebrate "President's Day." One hundred and fifty guests were present.

Mrs. Abe Foster acted as toastmaster. Each Sisterhood of the city was represented. Addresses were made by the following: Mrs. Barnett Davis, B'nai Israel; Mrs. S. B. Friedman, Poale Zedeck; Mrs. Goodman Rose, Beth Shalom; Mrs. Goldberg, Tree of Life; Mrs. Parfect, South Side; Mrs. M. A. Levin, Adath Jeshurun.

Rev. Canter Racusin and Mrs. Racusin sang several Jewish selections. Miss Hilda Caplan also sang and recited.

Rabbi M. A. Levin spoke and presented a gift to Mrs. Chas. Tannenbaum who brought the pleasant afternoon to an end with an address.

The Sisterhood takes this means of thanking all their guests who helped to make this affair such a tremendous success, also the following, who have worked so hard and faithfully to make it successful:

Unveiling of Monument for Sophie Loeb

More than two hundred friends and relatives assembled last Sunday at the Westchester Hills Cemetery, Mt. Hope, N. Y., for the unveiling of the monument for Sophie Irene Loeb, well-known social worker and writer.

Dr. Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue officiated. After conducting the regular services in the chapel of the cemetery, Dr. Wise led the mourners to the tomb where he delivered the memorial address.

"Sophie Irene Loeb's whole life is summed up in the few words on her monument—'NOT CHARITY BUT A CHANCE FOR EVERY CHILD'," Dr. Wise said. "They are her everlasting memorial and will be an inspiration to us and those who follow us. And yet, just the one word 'CHILD' would have sufficed for Sophie Irene Loeb's tombstone. The whole world would know the meaning of it, for the whole world has come to appreciate her contribution to the welfare of the child of this nation and every other nation.

"She was the champion of the underprivileged child and she gave herself unceasingly that it might enjoy every opportunity in life. She gained immortality by linking her name unconsciously and unostentatiously to an immortal cause. Her whole life was dedicated to this cause and those of us who were truly her friends must continue in her footsteps."

Miss Loeb's mother, Mrs. Mary C. Simon; her two brothers, A. M. Simon and I. A. Simon of Pittsburgh, and two sisters, Mrs. William MacMahon and Mrs. Irving Bennett of New York attended the services.

Mayor Walker was preesnted by Montrose Strassburger, Assistant Corporation Counsel. Others present included Mr. August Heckscher, President of the Child Welfare Committee of America, a national organization founded by Miss Loeb in 1924 in an effort to bring widows' pensions into every state; Margaret Woodrow Wilson, daughter of the late president, and vice president of the Committee; Judge Samuel D. Levy of the Children's Court,

Notice to "Y" Members

Members of the "Y" are urged to read the Jewish Criterion for news of "Y" activities. There will be no issues of the "Y" Weekly during the summer months.

Movie Sunday Night

The regular summer movie season begins this Sunday night with a well-known feature and short comedy. All members of the "Y" are invited to attend. Membership cards must be presented at the door.

Swim in the "Y" Pool

The most delightful thing any person can do during the hot summer months is to take a plunge in the cool, crystal-clear swimming pool at the "Y." Frequent water tests and the most modern hygienic treatment to the water and basin guarantees swimming under the most favorable conditions.

Baseball

The "Y" baseball team is making a good showing in the Central League, having won five games and lost only four. The team is playing against fast competition in one of the strongest leagues in the city. The games are played at the Magee Field every Thursday night. Members of the "Y" are urged to come out and support the team.

Mushball League

Two outdoor mushball leagues are keeping the gym frequenters excited these days. The Senior League has just started, but judging from the way the teams are balanced, there is every possibility of a very close race.

The Intermediate League has been close all season and there is a likelihood that the Louis Little Club, the Chesters and the Phi Theta Deltas will end the regular schedule in a deadlock. The final games will be played June 30.

Fathers and Sons Swim

A special swimming period from 10 A. M. until 1 P. M. on Sundays has been put into the schedule for the summer months and is known as Fathers and Sons hour. There is no greater sport for the little fellow than to paddle around with his dad in a swimming pool. Members of the "Y" who are looking for a real thrill should avail themselves of the privilege of bringing their little fellows for a swim on Sunday morning.

Gym Classes

In response to the demand for regular gym classes during the summer, the evening calisthenic drills for men and women will be continued as usual.

Change in Schedule for Boys

Beginning June 30 the boy juniors will have their classes on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 11 A. M. to 12 noon.

Bickur Cholim Society Meeting

A special meeting of the Bickur Cholim Society will be held Tuesday, June 24, at the Jewish Day Nursery. There will be memorial services for Mrs. Nieman and Mrs. Goldstein, deceased members. All members are urged to attend.

Heraldic Expert at Hardy and Hayes

Pittsburgh families had better look to the coats of arms and crests they have been sporting, and make sure, now while they have the opportunity, that they are not using non-authentic family emblems.

Mr. Leonard Wilson, F. S. A. Scot., Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts, is in Pittsburgh with the Hardy and Hayes Company, for the express purpose of serving those families who are desirous of having the heraldic tokens of their lines restored to them. He has been in America for a number of years and has served a large majority of the principal families in this capacity.

He told us a few things that we would have been in ignorance about for the rest of our lives had we not met him. For instance, our own family—but we won't go into that. We were informed that while many a woman is using a crest on her stationery, she has absolutely no right to it, since it is a distinctly masculine device. The coat of arms belongs to the women of the family.

Mr. Wilson remarked that the study and research required to establish the right of a family to a coat of arms and to procure a perfect record of the escutcheon is a peculiar and very difficult task for which but few are fitted. It is the more difficult here in America because it requires a research into the history of the family, procuring information as to the progenitor who came here on the Mayflower or another of those intrepid cockle boats that at that time passed for ships. And then the investigation has only started. Eventually the true emblem of the family is discovered. Mr. Wilson is qualified to copy and execute the design that has been granted to the family and has with him a number of interesting examples of the work he has done in this field.

R-K-O SHERIDAN SQUARE THEATRE

One of Broadway's greatest comedy hits of all time comes to the screen Monday, when "The Fall Guy," scintillating talking picture adaptation of the original play opens for a week's engagement. Forty-two weeks on Broadway and a three years' run in all parts of the globe is the record hung up by the successful play. Brilliantly written by George Abbot and James Gleason, two of the nation's greatest playwrights, "The Fall Guy" is the type of production which proves ever-popular. Intimate, human and hilariously amusing, the play is perfect in every respect for screen treatment.

Radio Pictures, producers of "The Fall Guy," has backed the play with a notable cast. Jack Mulhall, star of scores of successful screen comedies, plays the title role. It is said the part gives him the greatest characterization he has ever portrayed.

A competent supporting cast includes Mae Clarke, Ned Sparks, Pat O'Malley, Dan McCorn, Wynne Gibson and Ann Brody.

"The Fall Guy" is the humorous tale of a white-collar man who loses his job and takes a fling at bootlegging to keep the home fires burning. He is made a "fall guy" for the gang and the most humorous of complications develop.

STANLEY THEATRE

"King of Jazz," heralded as one of the most entertaining as well as outstanding productions of the year, is the current screen attraction at the Stanley Theatre, starting Thursday, June 19th, with John Boles, Laura LaPlante, Twin Sisters G, Glenn Tryon, Jeanette Loff, Jeanie Lange and a host of others. Paul Whiteman and his famous band supply the music.

Hilarious comedy, serious drama, exotic dancing and melodious music alternate in breath-taking fashion, combining to make pure, unadulterated entertainment.

Produced by the makers of "All Quiet On the Western Front," the Universal Producing Company, the same lavishness and carefulness of detail which characterizes the famous war picture is here noted.

Sometimes an erring husband breaks up a home and sometimes its the wife, but at the Stanley this week it's a hilarious cast of funsters whom Dick Powell presents as the "Home Wreckers" that are causing all the trouble.

Featuring O'Donnell and Blair, Powers and Wallace, and Andrew and Louise Carr, it offers as diversified a program of entertainment as it is possible to devise.

An extra added attraction is The Harmonica Kid, the most talented mouth-organ player ever to grace a stage.

Scene from "Golden Dawn"-A Warner Bros. Production

Dick, as usual, will sing a medley of popular songs as his contribution and in addition has convened another meeting of the now famous "Steins." Bernie Armstrong is at the organ with another of his popular song fests.

WARNER THEATRE

Walter Woolf, last seen here at the Nixon in "The Red Robe," has the leading role, supported by Vivienne Segal and Noah Beery.

Golden Dawn" marks the advent of a new era in screen entertainment. For the first time since talking pictures became the vogue, a stage musicale has been transferred to the screen in full color and musical accompaniment.

Two new songs, "My Heart's Love Call" and "In a Jungle Bungalow," destined to be among the oustanding hits of the next month, have been added to the original music score.

ENRIGHT THEATRE

So enthusiastically and appreciatively was Nancy Carroll's latest production "The Devil's Holiday" received at the Stanley last week that it was transferred to the Enright.

"The Devil's Holiday" is one of the finest productions ever to reach the screen and undoubtably will rank high in the list of the best pictures of 1930.

Hallie Hobart was a gold-digger—men were her game and she played them. Then David Stone came along and Hallie made him fall in love with her. In a moment of hate and passion and seeking revenge she married him, providing the basis for one of the simplest and at the same time exceptionally powerful films ever to play the talking screen.

Cyril Guthoerl is at the organ with a novelty logue.

MANOR THEATRE

Gary Cooper comes to the Manor on Monday and Tuesday in "The Texan." Fay Wray has the leading feminine role in this gunpowder romance.

On Wednesday and Thursday, "The Vagabond King," featuring a super cast, including Dennis King, Jeanette MacDonald and Lillian Roth, will be the all-technicolor attraction.

Friday William Powell will be starred in the third Paramount screen adaptation of an S. S. Van Dine mystery novel, "The Benson Murder Case." Saturday "It's a Great Life" will be the attraction.

HARRIS THEATRE

Sally O'Neil and Molly O'Day will appear in person at the Harris Theatre all week and their newest screen feature "Sisters," will also be shown. The girls have an agreeable offering that recently played in the east and with Victor Graff and the R-K-Olians of Ralph Harrison promise to make things lively at the Harris. It is not generally known that the two girls are real sisters and have many screen successes to their credit. They have been on the speaking stage, vaudeville and otherwise, for some time before taking up screen work. "Sisters" is an entertaining comedy-drama, alive with human interest.

Ruth

The story of Ruth and Naomi, the most picturesque two women of ancient times, has thrilled the heart of mankind for countless generations. RUTH—that noble and self-sacrificing Gentile girl, leaving her native land and her people to be a comfort and solace to her old and aged mother-in-law. Where, in song or story, can one find a more loyal and devoted daughter-in-law? And where in life or literature can one find a more gentle and loving mother-in-law than Naomi?

This simple and charming narrative has inspired some of the finest works of art and poetry. But no one has penetrated into this stirring and romantic tale so deeply as Z. Raban of the Bezalel Art School of Jerusalem, who has lived and worked the best part of his life in the Holy Land, the background of this great human drama. After many years of intensive labor, Mr. Raban produced a series of pictures, portraying the lives and adventures of Ruth and Naomi—pictures that are redolent of ancient Judea and vibrant with the rugged life of its people.

The American Palestine Art Publishing Company has now produced these masterpieces in one large handsome volume, printed on especially heavy quadricolor paper, size of page, 9½ by 12. The book is artistically bound, embossed and stamped in gold letters. The volume opens with an illuimnating introduction by Professor Mordecai M. Kaplen, founder of the society for the advancement of Judaism. Each picture is interpreted on the opposite page by appropriate quotations from the book of RUTH—not the complete text—yet so quoted and arranged as to convey the whole story in brief. This phase of work has been prepared by Jacob Richman, author of "Laughs from Jewish Lore."

This work of art and beauty should be in the home of every Jewish family.

Camp Hakoah

Mr. Sol Ozer, Director of Camp Hakoah for Boys, announces the opening of the 1930 season on June 29th. Located on the shores of Lake Erie, 36 miles west of Cleveland, Camp Hakoah is designed to serve not only the boys of Cleveland. The enrollment already shows that many towns throughout Ohio as well as Detroit and Pittsburgh will be represented.

Camp Hakoah covers 60 acres of field and woodland with a large private camp beach, one of the finest along Lake Erie. There is a fine athletic field for all sports, baseball, basketball, handball, tennis, and a large practice fairway for golf and miniature golf courses for juniors.

There are spacious, well-built, sunlit dormitories, equipped with modern plumbing and showers. Camp counsellors and instructors sleep in the dormitories with their charges. In the administration building there are the kitchens, large airy dining room and a recreation hall with open fireplace.

Camp Hakoah is devoted to the principles of proper juvenile training and aims to develop initiative and leadership with its group activities.

Camp Director Sol Ozer has organized a splendid group of college men to lead and train the boys in the various activities at Camp Hakoah; for the long summer evenings there are beach parties, dramatics, singing, stunt nights, talks on Jewish subjects.

Suggestions for the Housewife

HUNGARIAN FRUIT SALAD

Mix together equal parts of banana, orange, pineapple, grapefruit and one-half cup of chopped nuts. Marinate with French dressing. Fill apple or orange skins with mixture. Arrange on a bed of watercress or lettuce leaves. Sprinkle with paprika.

SALMON SALAD

Either cold boiled salmon or the canned variety may be used. In the latter event wash the fish in cold water, drain and expose to the outside air for at least one hour, as this removes any suggestion of the can. Flake the fish into small particles and to each cupful of the fish add the same quantity of shredded lettuce, one coarsely chopped hard-boiled egg, three slices of minced cucumber and six chopped olives. Mix the ingredients well, moisten with either a mayonnaise or boiled dressing and serve in individual portions in nest of heart lettuce leaves. Mask each portion with tablespoon of dressing and garnish with capers and grated egg yolk.

PECAN, WALNUT OR HICKORY NUT MACAROONS

Take one cup of pulverized sugar, and one cup of finely pounded nut meats, the unbeaten whites of two eggs, two heaping teaspoons of flour, and one scant teaspoon of baking powder. Mix these ingredients together and drop from a teaspoon which you have previously dipped in cold water, upon buttered paper. Do not put them too near each other, for they always spread a great deal. Bake about fifteen minutes.

STEAMED BERRY PUDDING

CAROL DECLARES OPPOSITION TO ANTI-SEMITISM

Bucharest.—In an interview with foreign correspondents on his accession to the throne of Rumania, King Carol admitted the existence of anti-Semitism in the country but declared that his government was out of sympathy with such prejudice. "There are anti-Semites in Rumania, as there are in every other country," Carol said, "but my government will not support it. The Rumanian people are open-minded and do not harbor prejudices. I wish to assure all minorities in the country that they will receive equal treatment and that their interests will be cared for."

REPORT 50,000 JEWS IN COMMUNIST PARTY

Moscow.—There are approximately 50,000 Jews in the Communist Party of Russia, according to figures that have been made public in connection with the annual All-Soviety Congress. In view of the fact that members of the Communist Party are recruited from among factory workers, the figure of 50,000 Jews indicates the rapid growth of industrialization among the Jewish population.

Chevrolet News

Chicago, Ill., June 20.—An outstanding achievement of the current motoring season was recorded here recently with the arrival of J. M. Griffith from Mexico City, in 138 hours of running time, in a 1922 Chevrolet touring car with five passengers.

Although nearing 64, Mr. Griffith drove every inch of the distance himself. After stopping off here two weeks, he proceeded to Detroit where he inspected several automobile plants and the General Motors proving ground, and then was impatient to be off on the long trek home to resume his occupation as mechanical engineer.

Leaving Mexico City on April 30, the party covered the 929 miles to the Border, crossed at Laredo, and proceeded to Chicago and Detroit with no mishaps other than two stop-overs, one for tire repairs and one, at San Antonio, for carbon removal and replacement of three exhaust valves in the eight-year-old car. The log of the trip, as reported by Mr. Griffith, provides statistics of interest to those contemplating a lengthy tour this summer:

Distance (Mexico City to Chicago), 2,514 miles; running time, 137.5 hours; average speed 18.28 miles per hour; gasoline consumption; 96.6 gallons, and the milage per gallon of gas was 26; cost of gasoline, $33.75; oil and greasing, $6.25; repairs to car, including tire repairs, $11.50. The total cost of transportation, exclusive of meals, hotel expenses and personal items, was $51.50, or at the rate of one-third cent a mile for each person in the car.

Despite the age of his Chevrolet, Mr. Griffith said that he started on the tour with no doubt as to the venerable old-timer's ability to cover the distance without trouble. In driving around Mexico City, prior to the start of the tour, the car was constantly being called upon to climb mountain passes up to 12,000 feet. The speedometer had registered 28,000 kilometers before leaving Mexico.

After spending several days here, following his return from Detroit, Mr. Griffith nosed his car toward the South, and started out on the return trip as nonchalantly as though his destination were only a few miles out of town or his car were a new 1930 six-cylinder model.

IT'S WISE TO CHOOSE A SIX

SIX reasons why it's wise to choose a "SIX"

1. It's Smooth! Chevrolet has a 50-horsepower six-cylinder valve-in-head engine that delivers its power with a smoothness and silence that are impossible with anything less than six cylinders.

2. It's Comfortable! Chevrolet offers modern spring suspension, roomy bodies, and a smooth-running six-cylinder engine.

3. It's Easy to Drive! Chevrolet provides an extra-easy ball bearing steering mechanism. And six-cylinder flexibility means unusual simplicity of control.

4. It's Beautiful! Chevrolet is the only low-priced car with Body by Fisher. Hence, its style compares favorably with that of costly cars.

5. It's Economical! The Chevrolet costs no more for gas—oil—tires—or service. And six-cylinder smoothness holds down costs, by protecting the car from destructive vibration.

6. It's Easy to Buy! The G. M. A. C. payment plan, with its easy terms, is available to all Chevrolet buyers. Come in! Confirm all the reasons why it's wise to choose a Chevrolet Six.

Settlement Boys Win in Olympics

Two Irene Kaufmann Settlement entries, Eugene Rosenthal and Morris Nahmood, carried off highest honors in the Junior Olympics city finals held last Friday, June 13, at the Pitt Stadium. Competing against a field of approximately 125 boys, the two "Irene Kaufmann Settlement" lads turned in scores in their respective divisions, which won for them in addition to city championship, a free trip to Atlantic City, where they will take part in the National Junior Olympics the week of July 7 to 13. Rosenthal, who ran up a score of 541 points in the Senior group was given a close battle by Dan Sill of Beltzhoover, who emerged with 536 points. Nahmood, with a score of 438 points in the Junior division, decisively beat out his nearest rival, Palmer Simmons of Watt School, whose greatest efforts produced a score of only 417 points. Four other boys competing under Irene Kaufmann Settlement colors, who also made notable showings in the meet were Ed Klein, Hymen Dektor, George Weingarten and "Chickie" Ainsman. The youngsters have been supervised in athletics by Joseph L. "Ziggy" Kahn, Settlement coach, and to Mr. Kahn is due a great part of the credit for their attainments.

BISHOP CANNON'S "JEWISH" RECORD

Bishop Cannon is getting his just deserts from a Jewish viewpoint, if one is to recall that venerable brother's denunciation of the Jews more than a year ago. The gentleman of the cloth aroused the ire of all right-minded persons when he stated in a public address that he could not stomach "these foreigners," thereupon indicating the Jewish race.

His activities at that time became so obnoxious that one of the most prominent merchants in Baltimore wrote to the late Louis Marshall condemning Cannon's activities in the South and requesting the great Jewish leader's intervention. The latter did so with a vengeance. At a luncheon given the presidential incumbent in New York City Mr. Marshall demanded that the Republican Party dissociate itself quickly and formally from the Bishop's activities.

Thereafter Mr. Marshall came to Baltimore, delivering one of the most memorable addresses in the presidential campaign—an address which turned the tide in Maryland from Smith and Bruce to Hoover and Goldsborough, the presidential and senatorial candidates respectively. Senator Goldsborough, in particular, profited by Mr. Marshall's address in Maryland, since the Jewish folk there had been especially incensed against the Bishop's activities. It was at this meeting that Galen Tait, chairman of the Republican State Committee of Maryland, declared in open meeting that the Party in Maryland had no official connection with the high churchman and disavowed the utterances of Cannon.

Now Cannon is in hot water, and deservedly so. But the churchman is a shrewd politician, and he saved his "ecclesiastical shirt" by consenting finally to testify before the Lobby Committee.

During the hearing a lady walked up to Chairman Caraway and said: "This is a Romanist hold-up of Protestant America, and I protest."

It is mighty fortunate that the word "Jewish" was not linked with "Romanist," as mob psychology always seems to link the Catholic with the Jew. Neither is it of great advantage to the principle of freedom of worship to call this country of ours Protestant America. Thus it is that when a churchman indulges in politics religion enters through the back door.

CATCH OF THE SEASON

The name of Merryle Stanley Rukeyser is a familiar one to those who read the financial columns in the daily press. It is a name that heads a famous series of articles in the Hearst papers and is now linked to Washington by matrimonial ties. At the Hotel Mayflower, on June 25th, this foremost financial writer will be married to Miss Bernice Helene Simon, daughter of one of the most prominent families of the Capital.

Rukeyser is one of the catches of the season. In addition to being a member of the faculty of Columbia University, he has just turned to broadcasting over the Columbia network on the unique subject of "lanterns that signal the return of prosperity." The subject in itself indicates that Washington influence is already being exerted by his wife-to-be in behalf of optimism, even in the stock market.

ISIDORE HERSHFIELD IN BOSTON

The National Conference of Jewish Social Service has at last devoted a full session to the all-important topic that enters into the daily lives of most of our people, namely, that of immigration.

Isidore Hershfield of Washington, national counsel of the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, was one of the chief speakers at that session. Mr. Hershfield has a world viewpoint and was early to forsee the necessity of diverting some of the Jewish immigration to South America and other places before the specter of restriction appeared upon the scene. Moreover, his intimate contact with the countries in Europe, gained through his numerous travels as European representative of HIAS and as Director of Relief for Poland in connection with the Joint Distribution Committee, combined with his American background, gives him an insight that very few persons have.

The inclusion of the subject of immigration at the National Conference this year was due to the fact that when Mr. Hershfield was called upon for an incidental discussion a couple of years ago he almost stopped the entire conference. The audience demanded more and more of his experiences and conclusions, with consequent delay to the program. Therefore the program committee had to forego some of its technical discussion of case work this year for this important topic of immigration.

THOSE JURYLESS TRIALS

Wet and Dry met and agreed for the first time in the history of the prohibition debate when two prohibitionists joined three anti-prohibitionists of the House Judiciary Committee in attacking the Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission for their recommendation of juryless trials.

Congressman Celler of New York is in the forefront of the attack and has joined with the Drys as well as the Wets to question the wisdom of tampering with the jury trial system. The Supreme Court recently declared that the system should be zealously guarded. Mr. Celler has the happy faculty of aligning himself on the side of justice and good constitutional procedure.

Under the "juryless trial" scheme a defendant in a petty prohibition case would be tried without jury by a United States commissioner, who would make recommendation for guilt or dismissal to the District Court, which would pass sentence or acquittal.

The Sabbath Angel

COPYRIGHT, 1930, BY JUDITH ISH-KISHOR

RESULT OF OUR "NATURE POETRY" CONTEST

All the honors, this time, have been carried off by girls! Perhaps the boys were playing ball out-of-doors, and didn't take the time to write; or else they were just not feeling "poetical" this Spring! For we know they can write! Oh, yes! We've seen them.

Our girls had a clear track, this time. And two delightful prize-winning poems came in. They were written by:

Xenia Flyer, aged 10; 5702 Fourteenth Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Xenia has never written for us before. We like her poem, "My Garden," very much.

And Eleanor Weinblatt, age 12; 2194 Cedar Avenue, New York City.

Eleanor has tried many times, and now she wins with "Spring Melody"! Hooray for both of them! I shall send them each a nice book. There were also several winners of honorable mention. They may be the prize-winners in another contest. Who knows? That's what often happens. So I want to congratulate: Miriam Weiskopf, age 12, 44 Bennett Avenue, New York City, for "Spring," and "The Farmer." Evelyn Shapiro of 436 Stratford Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., for "April Showers." We shall also print poems sent in by Ethel Obedin, Sara Lewis, Sylvia Friedman, Gertrude Pollak, and Ethel Karlin. Sylvia made several entries; and if any of them had been as good as her earlier poem, "Life," it would have been a winner. I would have given an extra prize for it. But I'm sure Sylvia must win, some day! Now I'll show you one of the prize poems:

SPRING MELODY

By Eleanor Weinblatt, Age 12

The tyrant Winter had left them
And all the world was gay,
And everyone was singing
In honor of the day.

First violet sang it gently
Then the breeze blew it along,
But robin tweeted boldly
Till the world burst into song.

E'en a throng of fairies passing
Could not resist the sound,
And each stopped just for a moment
To dance in glee around.

Then is Springtime queen of beauty,
And is melody her King?
Oh! It seems so, for the angels
Heard the song and called it "Spring."

HOW TO TAKE "BAD LUCK"

Rabbi Ben Ezra, the poet and philosopher of Spain in the Middle Ages, was a very unlucky man. In fact, he used to say of himself:

"If I were trying to sell candles, then the sun would never go down. And if I sold grave-clothes, people would stop dying!" So you see that he knew how to "take' 'his misfortune. He joked about it. And that's what the finest sort of Jews have always done.

HERE, THERE AND EVERYWHERE

One of Earliest-Printed Bibles for Library of Congress

A Bible printed almost five hundred years ago, by Gutenberg, who invented the printing press, is to be the newest treasure in the Library of Congress at Washington.

Of course, Gutenberg Bibles are extremely rare. This copy, together with some other fine volumes from the earliest days of printing, is to cost a million-and-a-half dollars! Think of that! And every one of the members in the House of Representatives voted to buy it. There was not a single vote objecting.

Perhaps one day, if you visit Washington, you may see this wonderful old volume. Then remember that the contents of that very Bible are from four to six times as old; and that the Old Testament is the honored work of your own people.

OUR MAIL

Here is an excellent letter from a Virginia girl. I think you'll enjoy reading it, just as I did:

"Dear Miss Ish-Kishor: I am a girl of 11 years old. I love books, but Mother says I read too much. However, I have not been reading much lately, as I am trying to find a good book and so far, have not been successful. But, I read your Page every Sunday and like it very much. Barbara Singer was my best-loved cousin and we were very close to each other.

I live in Marion, Virginia, a town of four or five thousand people. We are the only Jewish people here. So Daddy gives Nancy and me Sunday School. He gets his data from the Hebrew Union College. When I visit in the cities, I go to school and love it. I love to go to school, and am in Junior High.

I have two very close friends, Helen Copenhover and Ellen Meade Wilson by name. We are all in the same grade at school. Ellen Meade is 11, Helen, 12. I would like to have someone my age correspond with me. Yours truly, Jean Luisa Stern." (Hillside, Marion, Va.)

I think it won't hurt you, dear Jean, since you're so well up in your school work and so far ahead for your age, to take a little rest from reading, as you are doing! Now we'll find a "writing friend" for you.

This letter is from Mary Fine, who lives at 444 W. Conway St. Baltimore, Md. Don't you think she sounds nice? "Dear Miss Ish-Kishor: I have been reading your Page for two years. I am a book-lover and would like to join the Booklovers. Since it appears to be the custom to describe yourself, here goes: I'm four feet, seven, have black hair and big brown eyes. As I'm very slender, I look like a boy. I am 11 years old, in the sixth grade in school and the fifth grade in Hebrew. I would like to have a correspondent who doesn't live in Baltimore. Sincerely yours, Mary Fine."

Herbert Leo has been traveling. I hope he'll get the correspondent he wants. Sorry I couldn't hurry more, Herbert, but we'll see now! "Dear Miss Ish-Kishor: I would like some one to correspond with, preferably someone not living in this country, or else someone living in the West. I have been reading this paper for three years. I am 12 years old and go to John Marshall Junior High School. I am in the eighth grade, and my hobby is chemistry. I don't like to read books or do anything else but experiment in chemistry. Would you please hurry my order for a correspondent? Yours truly, Herbert Leo, 1372 Bresel Avenue, Pasadena, Calif. P. S.—I want a correspondent from the West because I live in New York and will probably come back in three months."

There, we hope this will be in time.

Riddle Box

Now we'll have an Acrostic, by the gifted Harold Wolfson, our puzzle champion of today. (His address is 714 West 181st Street, New York, N. Y.) First find these out:

1. A Shevuoth heroine.
2. A precious stone in the High Priests' breastplate. (Exodus Chap 28.)
3. A strong Hebrew who defeated the Philistines.
4. The second High Priest of the Hebrews.
5. The mountain where Moses died.
6. The place that Moses led the Jewish people through.
7. Joseph's wife.
8. A Book of the Pentateuch.
9. A tribe of Israel.

Write these down underneath each other, and the first letters, read downwards, will make the name of a distinguished Jewish philanthropist and friend of education. Then if you find out who he is, you will have the distinction of being on the Honor Roll, and we'll all be pleased. Let's look over those "missing words" in the texts from the Book of Exodus:

1. "Let my people go." (Spoken in the name of God, by Moses to Pharoah.

2. "Who made thee a ruler and a judge over us? thinkest thou to kill me as thou didst kill the Egyptian?" When Moses tried to part the two Hebrews whom he found fighting with each other, one of them said these words.

3. "Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground." The angel of the Lord said this when he appeared to Moses from the burning bush.

4. "I am the Lord thy God." God speaks to the children of Israel. Because in some cases, there was a printer's error in this sentence, we will also accept some other answers that were given, as correct.

Now, do you remember these? Some of our brilliant young students will rise to glory on the Honor Roll! Watch for them!

TALES FROM THE MAGIC BOOK

A New Leader and a New Wonder

Moses was gone. Thirty days the people mourned and wept, for they loved him dearly, even though they had not always understood and obeyed him.

It grieved them, too, that they could not show honor to his dead body. Ancient peoples used to glory in the splendid burial of their heroes. But the lonely death of Moses was worthy of his noble life. He knew that in Egypt the dead were preserved and almost worshipped. He was afraid that Israel might come to idolize his tomb, when they should pray and look for help, to God alone. That is why he wandered away from them when he felt death coming!

Now while the people were still sunk in grief, and did not know which way to turn, God's call came to Joshua, the son of Nun, who had been the devoted helper of Moses. (He, if you remember, was one of the two courageous spies who had brought a good report of the Promised Land).

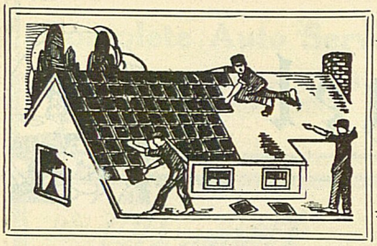

"Moses, My servant, is dead," God said to Joshua. "But as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee. I will not fail thee nor forsake thee. Be strong, and of good courage! For thou shalt cause this people to inherit the land which I swore unto their fathers to give them."

And God told the faithful, modest Joshua how, by a new marvel, Israel was to cross over the Yardehn; and how they should begin on their conquest of the Land.

The people soon felt that they had a new and good leader. First of all Joshua wanted to find out what was the state of the people on the other side of the river. He chose two brave men—we do not know their names—and sent them forward to spy out the strength of Jericho.

About ten miles north of the Dead Sea, among the palm groves of the rich, deep Yardehn Valley, stood Jericho—the key city of the Land. It covered the top of an oval-shaped mound. Around the crest of the steep hill ran a great wall, so thick that houses had been built along the top of it. To make it yet harder for an enemy to climb, half-way up, the wall began to bulge outward. In the middle of the city was a second wall. And further in, surrounding the King's palace and the homes of the nobles, was still a third one, the highest of all, with four gigantic watch-towers looking out over the Plain. Can you wonder why no enemy had ever taken it? Our two scouts set out.

daism. The Central Conference of American Rabbis has drawn up a program of social justice. It contains what is, in the opinion of the rabbis of America, the minimum social justice requires of Jews. Jews who ignore that program deny their faith.

There is a Midrash which tells us that after the first Jewish sanctuary had been built in the wilderness two Arks were put in the Holy of Holies. One Ark was new and contained the new tablets of the Ten Commandments. The other Ark was old. It contained the tablets broken by Moses when he saw Israel worshiping the Golden Calf. This old Ark with the broken Commandments, the Midrash tells us, was used to lead the army of Israel whenever it went forth into battle. What a glorious symbol! When a people goes to war its Ten Commandments, its moral law have ipso facto been abandoned.

I do not know before what Golden Calf modern Israel worships. But unless in the future the ideal of social justice dominates in Jewish life the Ten Commandments, our moral law, will be broken even though artistic and gilded tablets of stone adorn our sanctuaries.

real folk songs. And Lici said: "You know, Papa, I have an idea that he can do a lot. You ought to write something together with him."

"An opera?" I made a wry face.

"Oh, he'll be able to compose an operetta just as well! Don't you think these Slavic songs would be very effective in an operetta too? They'd be something new, anyway."

I grew thoughtful.

"And besides, Papa, don't forget that march, 'Jetzt geht's los!' That's just the thing for a popular hit. Go ahead, Papa, write something with this Lehar. You'll see, it'll be a great success. I feel it."

III

We were back in Vienna. It was fall. I had written him a few lines—I wonder whether he remembers? I was writing no operas, I told him; but if he had any ideas for an operetta I should be glad to see him. He came to call on me. Lici received him, for I was not at home. She was the first whom he saw and with whom he spoke in my house. She welcomed him—she, who had discovered him. I found the two in the midst of a conversation. He was smiling all the while with that peculiar smile of his—winning, yet with a touch of irony A curious mixture that makes one like him and yet wonder about him. Lici's little face was flushed with excitement. I saw that his personality had impressed her tremendously. Besides, he had something more wherewith to impress her: the magic of his uniform.

Then, after various discussions and trials, came my—I mean our—I mean his "Rastelbinder." Then "Der Gottergatte." And that miraculous masterpiece, "Die lustige Witwe." It rose like a brilliant sun whose radiance soon filled all the world—"The Merry Widow," bringing joy to all lands. With it was born the Golden Age of the operetta. An entire genre was brought to the loftiest heights of perfection in an unbelievably short time by this man, by Ferenc Lehar.

IV

We were in 1918. We sat in his studio, where he had concevived the music that delighted people everywhere. He was at the piano. Lici was on his left, I on his right. Our eyes were fixed on a notebook filled with the hieroglyphics sacred to his goddess, the mystic runes of his art. He was playing "Die gelbe Jacke,' another one of the operettas we wrote together. It had been Lici, by the way, who had given me the idea for the libretto which he was now clothing in the fine raiment of his music.

And as he sat there, sublimely disregardful of the opportunistic demands of theatrical directors and producers, I felt that he had reached the loftiest heights of artistic achievement—Lehar — the king of the operetta.

NEW YORK TOPICS

By JOSEPH BRAININ

THERE IS NOTHING WRONG, PROFESSOR

Professor Israel Davidson, outstanding Jewish scholar of the Jewish Theological Seminary of New York, laments the fate of the present-day rabbi. The modern rabbi is a book critic, art connoisseur, social lion and campaign manager—everything, in fact, except a scholar, he complains. And we are inclined to agree with him. Yet we would add that there is nothing wrong with being an art connoisseur or a book critic. As a matter of fact, it requires as much intelligence and more talent than being a scholar. As regards the social requirements of a rabbi or his activities as a campaign manager—these simply stamp our religious leaders as men of action. The trouble, Professor, is that many of our rabbis know no more of art or books or campaign managing than they do of Jewish lore. It is this that makes them pathetic figures. But in view of the fact that resignations are very much in vogue these days one may hope that those remaining in their positions of all-around social lions will take the warning of Professor Davidson to heart.

MENS SANA IN CORPORE SANO

David Weiner has been adjudged the most physically fit of 65,000 boys in the New York high schools. In special tests of step and leap, rope climbing, basketball throwing, a potato race and posture drill, the Jewish lad compiled the highest score and achieved fame; in addition, he received the personal congratulations of President Hoover. The redeeming feature of this athletic success is that David has no intention of ever becoming a professional sportsman. He is not even interested in sports, and is considered a very bright pupil in English and chemistry. Besides, his ambition is to become a chemical engineer. There is something decidedly refreshing in the Jewish lad who, while a most perfect specimen of health, recognizes his physical superiority only in the light of "mens sana in corpore sano."

SOCIAL CLIMBING

Joe Jacobs is a very picturesque figure. No, he is not a philanthropist, nor is he the chairman of any national reception committee. But a few days ago Joe Jacobs became the manager of the official heavyweight boxing champion of the world, Max Schmelling. Jacobs has been in the fighting game all his life—as a manager, of course. A few years ago he was regarded as one of the many bystanders in the fighting racket. Through "astounding" political strategy he made Schmelling abandon the manager who brought him to the fore, and about a year ago he took charge of the German boy who looks like Dempsey. Now that the Black Uhlan won the championship Joe Jacobs, who always wears a checkered cap, becomes the owner of a million dollar business. And don't be surprised if soon you see his name on some impressive Jewish committee letterheads. After all, business is business.

A FUTILE DEBATE

The rabbis do monopolize a great deal of publicity. We suppose it is part of their social lionizing. Thus Rabbi Clifton Harby Levy, founder of the Jewish science movement, declared the other day that intermarriage between Jew and Christian is permissible." Well, the question has been open for debate for quite many years and probably will remain a subject of discussion. Yet it is highly interesting that a rabbi should approve of the intermingling of religious faiths and not care a rap if the children of such marriages are raised in a non-Jewish faith. And still more startling is the fact that Rabbi Levy's announcement did not even cause a ripple on the smooth surface of American Jewish life. Nobody seems to know or care what the leader of the Jewish Science Movement thinks on intermarriage. And here we are at a loss to decide: Is the indifference due to the rather, let us say, unrecognized standing of Jewish Science, or do most of us recognize that it is highly futile to lay down laws on intermarraige? We are inclined to believe that the latter is the case.

THE BIG PARADE

The other day we dropped into a movie to see the screening of New York's Jewish parade against the suspension of Jewish immigration into Palestine. We had missed the parade proper because, to be perfectly frank, it was a rather hot day—one of those record-breaking days—and at the time when the big parade was to begin our spirit was willing but the flesh was weak. So, sitting comfortably in an air-cooled movie, we watched the fifty thousand Jews parading in the scorching heat of a ninety-degree New York afternoon; not very heroic on our part, we admit. The Universal News Reel flickered on the screen while the inimitable Major McNamee broadcast the explanations. The Big Parade, with banners calling on Great Britain to keep faith with the Jews, marched proudly past us. The march was led by a few rows of rather elderly rabbis, men of more than sixty, dragging their tired feet and bodies in the suffocating heat. At their head marched the old (some say he is over 90) Nissim Behar of Alliance Israelite fame. McNamee, who does not know much about Palestine or the stoppage of immigration, had somehow felt that there was something beautiful in these old men marching under a broiling sun to protest against mighty England for Jewish rights. One of his comments was to the effect that "those old boys sure love Jerusalem." And we suddenly felt very hot and rushed out of the air-cooled movie.

AGAIN MOLLIE PICON

Mollie Picon, the favorite Yiddish stage star, is appearing at a big motion picture palace in New York these days. She is going through a short program of Yiddish and English songs; but, strange to say, the East Side audience which was expected to fill the place was missing. We commented on this odd box office trick to a connoisseur of Broadway theatricals, and that expert told us: "Mollie Picon is a very clever performer, yet her so-called box office value is overrated. She has been overpublicized. Whenever a New York columnist is out of material he concocts some kind of a yarn about the Picon, and thus she has received more publicity than she should have had. We wonder whether she thinks it was too much?

A GOOD IDEA

The New York Allied Campaign is announcing, at the time of writing, that it has reached the amount of one million dollars so far. It is still one and one-half million behind its quota of two millions and a half. The million dollars collected thus far include the donation of Felix M. Warburg, who, we believe, gave a quarter of a million together with Mrs. Warburg. With the summer season almost full upon us it is doubtful whether the New York campaign can do much more at this juncture. The raising of the balance of the quota would have to be postponed to the fall in that case. In view of the optimistic prophecies of the President, who assures us that prosperity will then be with us again, the winding up of the New York campaign in the fall seems to be a rather good idea.

BLUM AMAZED BY BRITISH PALESTINE STAND

Paris.—Leon Blum, leader of the Socialist Party of France, declares himself amazed at the stand taken by the British Government with regard to Palestine, in an interview published in the Yiddish "Haint." This attitude, he says, is particularly inexplicable when it is considered that Premier MacDonald and Foreign Minister Henderson had a part in founding the Pro-Palestine Committee of the International Socialist Party. Declaring his belief that reactionaries in the Colonial Office must be guiding the political destiny of Palestine, he expresses the expectation that the situation will be favorably disposed of shortly.

"THERE'S YOUR ANSWER AMOCO-GAS it keeps 'em on the road!"

WITH every other car he'd ever driven, the 10,000-mile mark was the signal for extensive and expensive repairs. This one, of the same make, had gone more than 22,000 miles and never had the cylinder head off Daily this West Virginia motorist expected trouble and daily the car seemed to run better. Finally he drove her into the shop.

He told the Service Manager to look it over and then telephone and let him know how many days it would take to put it in shape.

A half-hour later the Service Manager called "Your car's ready, sir."

Amazed, the motorist hurried down.

"That was quick work," he began.

"There wasn't much to be done," was the answer. "We took out a few squeaks and rattles and made the carburetor adjustment leaner."

"But how about carbon? And the valves and rings? The car's gone over 22,000 miles and hasn't been touched."

"Well, if you want to spend some money, we can do it. But the motor's as good as the day you bought it."

The motorist smiled. "I don't know what's happened. Sounds too good to be true."

"What gas have you been using?" the Service Manager asked.

"Amoco—in this car."

"There's your answer, then—Amoco-Gas. It keeps 'em on the road and out of the shop."

AMOCO-GAS
LOW COST PER MILE is what counts

IT DOES MORE, IT'S WORTH MORE so it costs more per gallon

And so another motorist found that Amoco-Gas actually costs less per mile. He bought it because he liked its performance and he was sold for life when he discovered that it saved him money.

You're coming to Amoco-Gas—and lowest cost per mile.
